LONDON (AP) — Israel is offering a new approach to a Mideast peace settlement, calling for an end to the Mideast arms race and a disarmament program, the Israeli ambassador to Britain said Thursday.

Ambassador Gideon Rafael said the contents of the eight-point approach have been made known to key governments, including the United States and Britain.

Most of Israel's Arab neighbors have refused to negotiate on a peace settlement until Israel agrees to surrender all lands it won in the several Arab-Israeli wars.

Some of the elements of the eight-point package outlined by Rafael in an interview have long been guidelines of Israeli policy, but others are new.

One new element in the plan described by Rafael is a proposed moratorium by both Israelis and Arabs on their multi-billion-dollar weapons programs. Such a moratorium, he said, would allow the two sides to set up a second new item — a "peace fund" for resettlement of refugees and development of the region.

"Israel now is spending something like $2 billion a year on armaments while the Egyptians, before the 1973 war, poured up to $10 billion into military preparations," Rafael said. "This gives a measure of the vast spending now taking place without even considering what other Arab governments are devoting to their military buildup."

The peace plan, as outlined by Rafael, would include:

—An end of all claims that a state of war exists and termination of all armed raids, support for "terrorist activities" and the waging of economic and political struggle between the two sides.

—Recognition of the sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of all states which sign the peace settlement.

—Withdrawal of forces "to secure and recognized boundaries" which the envoy stressed would be matters for negotiation. He offered no definition of Israeli territorial demands or ambitions.

—Special arrangements to underpin the security of Israel and its Arab neighbors — meaning early warning and other systems to guard against surprise attack.

—Freedom of navigation for all the parties in international waterways. This is a plain reference to the Suez Canal and the Tiran Strait off southernmost Israel.

—Acceptance by both sides of certain obligations, to be negotiated, for settling refugee problems. This appeared to be a sign of Israeli willingness to compensate Arabs displaced from their homes in the various conflicts since 1948.

—A big power withdrawal to the sidelines of the region, leaving Israelis and Arabs to make peace themselves. Rafael commented that "a dictated peace, imposed by the big powers, will not last but will only extend big power involvement."

New York prospects brighten

Ford hopes looking up

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

President Ford may have gained more while staying home Thursday than the half-dozen other candidates did running around in search of votes for next Tuesday's presidential primary elections in six states.

The President's possible gain will come on the eve of those primaries, when New York's uncommitted Republican delegates will hold a meeting. After the meeting, Ford may have more than 100 more delegates to the party's national convention, pushing him

State GOP Chairman Richard Rosenbaum called for the meeting on Thursday, two days after Ford won the Michigan and Maryland primaries, and Rosenbaum later told a reporter he would push the uncommitted delegates to switch their support to Ford.

"Things have progressed to the proper point for New York State to use our influence and exert our leadership," Rosenbaum said in announcing the meeting.

After Tuesday's primaries, Ford had 435 delegates and Reagan had 522. Uncommitted delegates totaled 372. Ford was off the campaign trail Thursday, while Reagan was on the hustings in Arkansas.

On the Democratic side, supporters of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey formed a committee to draft him for the Democratic nomination. Committee chairman Rep. Paul Simon of Illinois said the action was taken without approval from Humphrey, who was busy on the Senate floor when the announcement was made.

"There are times when the office must seek the candidate," the committee said. The former vice president and 1968 candidate has said he won't campaign actively but would accept a draft.

Even without Humphrey, frontrunner Jimmy Carter faced what seemed like a travel agent's nightmare: Trying to keep up with four candidates vying for votes in six primaries next Tuesday.

The candidates are Idaho Sen. Frank Church, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., Arizona Rep. Morris Udall and Alabama Gov. George Wallace. All were out pumping hands somewhere Thursday.

Church and Brown were in Nevada and Oregon, Udall in Kentucky and New Jersey, and Wallace in Arkansas. Carter could not be everywhere, but he did manage to hit two states, Nevada, which votes next Tuesday, and California, which votes June 8.

That left two states holding primaries next Tuesday without a visiting presidential hopeful on Thursday — Idaho and Tennessee.

Col. Cork to head 351st Wing

Col. Clifford D. Cork

KNOB NOSTER — Col. Clifford D. Cork will assume command of the 351st Strategic Missile Wing at Whiteman Air Force Base here during flight line ceremonies and a formal wing review at 10 a.m. next Thursday.

Col. Cork will assume the command from Col. William M. Kottas, who is leaving for Offutt Air Force Base, Neb., where he will be secretary of the joint staff, Joint Strategic Target Planning Staff. Col. Kottas has held the command since July of 1974.

Col. Cork was previously vice commander of the 90th Strategic Missile Wing at F.E. Warren Air Force Base, Wyo. Brig. Gen. Walter B. Ratliff, commander of the 40th Air Division, will participate in the ceremonies.

The public is invited to attend a reception in the Whiteman recreation center following the flight line ceremonies.

The 351st Strategic Missile Wing command includes responsibility for 150 Minuteman missiles located over a 16,000-square-mile area of West-central Missouri.

B1 bomber program delayed until 1977

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 44 to 37 Thursday to delay production of the controversial and costly B1 bomber until after the presidential inauguration next year.

It adopted an amendment by Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, delaying the ultimate decision until Feb. 1, 1977, 12 days after the inauguration.

The Culver amendment would require the President to certify the plane is essential to national defense.

The Senate earlier had voted 48 to 33 to reject an amendment by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., which would have killed B1 production altogether by deleting some $1 billion from the pending $31.9-million military procurement bill.

Culver said the B1 has not been adequately flight-tested and that there is insufficient data to justify the Senate's approving a project which ultimately could cost $21.6 billion or more.

The House rejected a provision similar to the Culver amendment when it considered the procurement bill.

Culver said the decision should be deferred until the "superheated" atmosphere of the present political campaign has subsided.

He said that after the inauguration, the President could "soberly" make the B1 decision solely on the merits and free of other pressures.

McGovern said the decision to kill the B1 should be made now. He said that the United States already has the attack and penetration capability it needs to hit every Soviet city with a population of more than 100,000 with 40 nuclear bombs.

The B1 is intended by the Air Force to replace the present fleet of B52s as the penetration bomber of the future.

The Air Force says it would be an essential part of the so-called "triad" defense system whose other legs include landbased missiles and missile-firing capacity of the submarine fleet.

Meantime, in Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass published a long commentary Thursday on the B1 bomber, calling it a major issue in the presidential campaign.

The bomber is also an important issue in Soviet-U.S. arms limitation talks, according to the commentary by Vladimir Goncharov, labeled a "Tass political observer."

"Contenders for the supreme government post in the U.S. find it useful to be standing next to it in a picture. Its sharp, glassy eyes and widespread wings rub shoulders on newspaper pages with the emblems of the biggest American politicians," Goncharov said.

USSR military threatening

U.S. foreign policy to remain same

OSLO, Norway (AP) — American foreign policy will remain essentially unchanged no matter who is elected president, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told a North Atlantic Treaty Organization meeting, according to diplomats who heard his speech.

Kissinger also told the group that Soviet leaders are under some temptation from ideologists to use their growing military strength, but he does not think the Soviet Union is bent on world domination.

Kissinger, the first speaker at the meeting, gave his address behind closed doors to foreign ministers of the 15-member NATO alliance.

Conference rules prohibit delegates from giving statements to the press. But, as usual at NATO meetings, the ban was widely violated. U.S. representatives were among the few who refused to discuss what went on.

Diplomats who attended Kissinger's speech said the secretary reviewed the American domestic debate on detente with the Soviet Union, outlining a logical set of imperatives he said would lock the next president, Democrat or Republican, into the current policy even if Kissinger is no longer in office.

A senior U.S. official admitted before Thursday's meeting that the current presidential campaign has slowed Kissinger's diplomatic initiatives, particularly toward the Russians. He said the Europeans think attacks on Kissinger by President Ford's opponents may have weakened the secretary's ability to carry out policy.

Kissinger described the Soviet military buildup as part of a calculated, long-range plan to put pressure on the West, a source said. By this theory, short of a military confrontation or virtual surrender, the United States has no alternative to the current policy of detente and meaningful planning for defense, no matter who wins the election.

Diplomatic sources said Kissinger made no direct reference to the expected

Foreigners eyeing U.S. campaign

LONDON (AP) — Western European governments, their futures tied with that of the United States, are watching the American presidential race closely, pondering the effects of a possible victory by such newcomers on the world stage as Jimmy Carter or Ronald Reagan.

Diplomatic reports from Washington show former Georgia Gov. Carter with an impressive lead in the Democratic presidential campaign and the governments are taking seriously the possibility he could win the nomination, an Associated Press survey shows.

The diplomatic reports also show President Ford facing a strong challenge from former California Gov. Reagan on the Republican side.

Government spokesman in key capitals refused comment on official assessments of the primaries to date, largely on grounds that this would be interfering in U.S. domestic affairs. But they made clear the kind of reports they are getting back from their embassies in Washington.

One European source, who refused to be identified by nationality, said his government had been surprised by the surge of Carter, seeming to wipe out the chances of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn.

Perhaps more significantly, informal soundings in Britain and France showed that many politicians expect the Democrats to win the presidency this year, partly on grounds that "the Republican cycle is coming to an end," as one put it.

Sources in both countries, however, stressed that this was a personal view and did not come from reading official government assessments.

One source also said his government had been surprised by the showing of Reagan, having assumed that Ford, as the incumbent president, would easily win the Republican nomination.

Government sources in five countries surveyed — Britain, France, West Germany, Italy and Sweden — refused to make predictions or discuss policy changes before the conventions name the candidates.

"The election is for the American people to decide," a British spokesman said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond of Missouri came to Washington Thursday to plug for his state's economic development and try to raise money for saving a collection of historic drawings.

Bond, 37, brushed aside suggestions that he was also lobbying for the Republican vice presidential nomination, but he left little doubt that he is available.

"It's flattering to be even considered," he said in response to a question at a news conference. If it were really offered in a positive way, I'd have to give it serious consideration. ... My personal preference is to say with what I'm doing now."

Bond, the nation's second youngest governor, organized a nonprofit organization called Bingham Sketches, Inc., to try to save 112 sketches by the renowned Midwestern artist George Caleb Bingham from being sold at public auction and dispersed.

Twenty-nine of the Bingham drawings are included in a major bicentennial exhibition at the National Collection of Fine Arts, a branch of the Smithsonian.

The drawings, the governor noted, depict rivermen, fur traders, ruffians, musicians and an occasional drunk along with others of politicians and political scenes of Bingham's times, 1811-1879.

Bought from the artist by a former mayor of St.

Louis, they were donated to the St. Louis Mercantile Library in 1868. Two years ago the library announced they would be auctioned off individually in New York.

Bond then organized a citizens' committee with the aim of raising $1.8 million by next June 30 to preserve the collection intact as the property of the people of Missouri.

About $400,000 remains to be raised; if it is, the drawings will be displayed at the Nelson Gallery in Kansas City and St. Louis Art Museum.

"Kit" Bond is most enthusiastic about the contribution made by his state's schoolchildren, who were asked to raise $15,000 to buy a drawing on Bingham's son, later used in his painting called "County Election." They raised more than $25,000 and are still at it, Bond said.

He used the occasion to talk about "the art of business and the business of art," seeking to promote Missouri's economic development.

He said the state is experiencing the greatest building boom in its history, and said an urban renaissance reshaping Kansas City and St. Louis is "only the tip of the iceberg."

About three-fourths of the new jobs created by private economic development last year, infusing $105 million in payrolls alone, went to metropolitan areas, Bond said.

He said the state will soon open its first overseas office to tap foreign corporate investment, but that location has not yet been determined.

Smoking irritates FTC's bureaucrats

Ever since the federal government told Americans in 1964 that smoking was bad for them, it has been frustrated by a disturbing fact: more and more people are continuing to smoke.

Americans smoked nearly 9 billion more cigarettes last year than in 1974, for an estimated total of up to 603 billion. In view of this situation, the Federal Trade Commission is looking for someone to pin the blame on.

It thinks it has found it in cigarette industry advertising. The FTC is undertaking an investigation into certain ads, which it believes "may tend to encourage consumers to ignore the grave health consequences of smoking."

As an example of this deplorable practice, the FTC cites a Salem ad in which a smoker says, "I don't analyze smoking, I enjoy it."

The FTC also wants a sterner health warning on cigarette packages, such as listing the diseases smoking can cause, or simply declaring that smoking

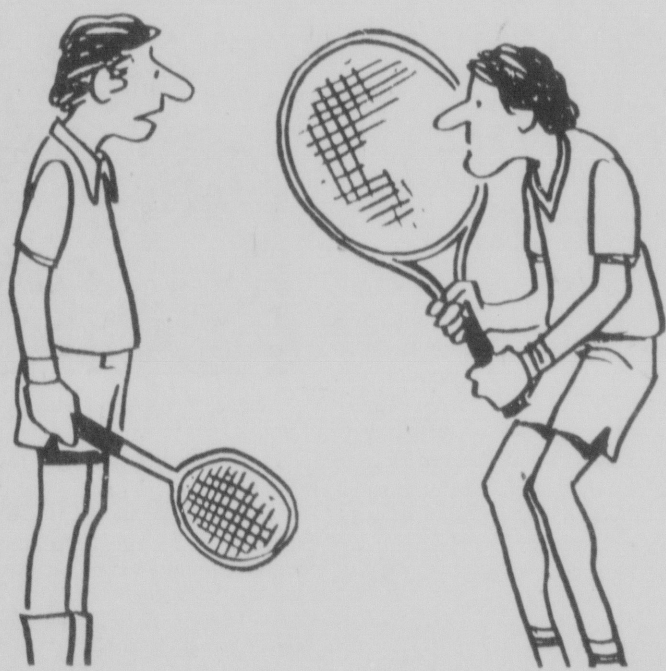

"may result in your death." We can see nothing wrong with this, as long as the warning accurately reflects the level of medical knowledge on the effects of smoking.

But the FTC's war on ads sounds like a textbook example of what happens to bureaucracies when they don't get their way. It is not enough to warn Americans of the dangers of smoking, we must somehow MAKE them stop.

By now, only a few hermits who have been living in caves for the past 15 years or so could be unaware of the dangers to health posed by smoking. In getting the word out, the federal government has done its job well.

But that's where it should stop. People continue to smoke because they want to, and we don't buy the FTC's naive notion that they are somehow being manipulated by Madison Avenue ad writers. Washington should accept that untidy fact, and not mother us all to death.

What about this Jerry Brown guy?

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — California's Gov. Jerry Brown came to our town last week, spent an hour at the Washington Star, and left a group of us wagging our heads. Some were wagging yes, and some were wagging no, and some were wagging catty-wampus. The catty-wampus wag means, ain't he sump'n?

Kilpatrick

He is sure 'nough something. The governor had come east to promote his fortunes in Maryland's presidential primary. His purpose was not to win delegates, for he had no delegate candidates running. His chief purpose was to give the Jimmy Carter campaign a bad case of acid indigestion. His secondary purpose was to get us wagging our heads.

Because this is written before the election, I can't say how he succeeded on the first score, but he did fine on the second. Brown is the classiest welterweight contender to come along in years. He has style. He may have substance also — I dunno — but in the jaded world of the Washington press corps he is a bright-plumed bird of passage.

Brown is 38. He is a good-looking fellow: dark hair, dark eyes, good firm brows, a mobile mouth. He stands maybe five-nine. My guess is that he puts on the first tie he happens to lay his hands on in the morning, and he seldom has time to get by the barbershop. He seems to be running sitting still.

Here in Washington, most of our time is spent with politicians who think they have the answers. They introduce bills, they sponsor resolutions, they promote various programs, they exude a certain confidence that to cure a given ailment, their particular medicine will work.

Brown, by contrast, doubts that much of anything will work. Our conversation began with a discussion of the Humphrey-Hawkins bill to provide for comprehensive economic planning. Brown seemed to be for it, more or less, but much more less than more.

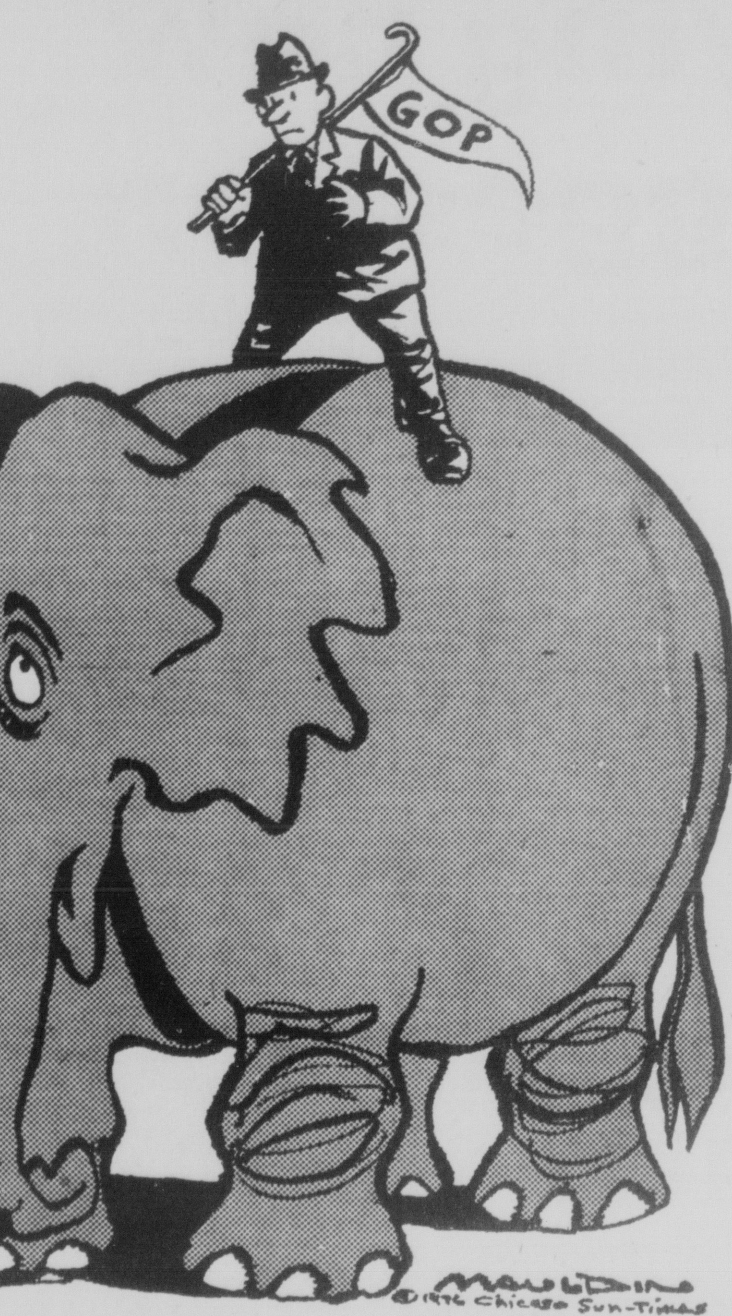

"I am very skeptical of economic planning," he said. "I'm skeptical of all planning. I don't have a lot of faith in fine-tuning the economy." If he were president, he would try to relieve unemployment in "small incremental ways," but he wouldn't promise miracles: "I'm skeptical of my own efforts."

During the course of the hour's discussion, the governor spread his doubts around.

"I am not sure the human species will survive."

"I am not sure the schools work."

"I have a very healthy skepticism about 'experts.'"

"Which half would you rather lose with?"

By JACK ANDERSON with
LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Inciting a feud that could rock the House, Republican leader John Rhodes has written a ferocious but fascinating attack upon Democratic leader Thomas "Tip" O'Neill.

The rules and customs of the House prohibit one congressman from disparaging a other. But in a soon-to-be-published book, Rhodes rips into O'Neill with uncharacteristic savagery.

It is all the more remarkable that the sedate Republican leader would dump on his opposite number, since they must deal daily with one another across the aisle. This could end bipartisan cooperation in the House.

The two leaders are disparate men: Rhodes businesslike and conservative, O'Neill a flamboyant Irish liberal. Yet there has been no hint of animosity in their daily House repartee, which has been conducted with elaborate, parliamentary politeness.

But behind the formal courtesies, apparently, Rhodes has been harboring some unflattering private opinions of O'Neill. "Tip can be impossible to deal with if you are in the minority," complains the minority leader.

In earlier times, most majority leaders consulted with the minority "on the scheduling of legislation, recesses and the like," Rhodes contends. "But not Tip."

The GOP leader quotes O'Neill as telling him: "The people gave us the mandate and we're not going to give it up... Republicans are just going to have to get it through their heads that they are not going to write legislation!"

Rhodes claims he tried to find a common ground with the Democrats that would have produced workable, veto-less legislation. "Consensus government," he called it. But he swears it "never had a chance to work because Tip O'Neill would not let it work. He would rather stand up on the floor and deliver a partisan attack on the President for vetoing a bill than sit down with the President early in the legislative process to help avoid a veto.

Merry-go-round

O'Neill is target of Rhodes attack

"Throughout 1975," adds Rhodes, "Tip began almost every session with a brief harangue against Administration policy." For O'Neill, charges the GOP leader, "the word Republican is a red flag waved beneath the nose of a feisty bull..."

"Tip O'Neill is a gregarious and engaging man. But he would rather go down in defeat time after time and veto after veto than ever to cooperate substantively with either the minority side or the Republican President."

We read O'Neill some of the rough words from Rhodes' forthcoming book, which will be called "The Futile System." Smoldering, O'Neill strode out on the House floor, fixed an evil eye on Rhodes and, watching his parliamentary language, declared:

"I look with the greatest of anticipation for the book, which I understand that the gentleman from Arizona has written. I trust that his remarks about the Democratic side will be honorable and credible, because I know the kind of man he is."

Rhodes shot back: "The gentleman from Massachusetts, I am sure, will find that he would like to read it."

O'Neill then gave us this statement, which is phrased more to the point: "When President Ford took over, I offered to sit down and compromise with him. But he is so conservative that it is impossible. It's worse with John Rhodes, because he is even further to the right than the President. But I think he is gregarious and engaging, too."

Footnote: Still burning over the excerpts we had read to him, O'Neill raised the subject on the House floor again the next day. He predicted that Rhodes' book would be a best seller.

"I say that," added the Democratic leader sarcastically, "having heard snatches from his book. I want to wish the gentleman every success."

Retorted Rhodes: "I am sure he (O'Neill) will find some very interesting reading in that book, and I will personally autograph it and give to him."

Art Buchwald Break for wayward FBI men

WASHINGTON — The revelations that the FBI has been committing all sorts of crimes, including break-ins, forgery, illegal bugging, violating civil liberties and worse, raises an important question. Should the people responsible for breaking the law of the land be tried and sent to jail?

Buchwald

Roderick Wilcomb, of the "Society to Rehabilitate Wayward G-Men," says it would be wrong to send FBI agents to prison for crimes committed in the name of national security.

"Society will not be served by putting these people away," he said. "Many of them came from broken homes and never had the breaks you or I had. If I thought punishment was the answer, I would be for it. But there has to be a better way to solve the FBI crime problem than locking the agents up."

"What do you suggest?" I asked.

"We have to teach them a trade so they can become responsible citizens again and learn that there is no future in crime."

"What kind of a trade?"

"We could teach them how to catch criminals — car thieves, kidnapers, hijackers and members of the mob. We could train them in law enforcement methods without breaking the law themselves. Once they learned the trade, they could go out and get jobs and not have to resort to housebreaking, spying and dirty tricks."

"That sounds like the bleeding-heart approach to crime," I accused Wilcomb. "Do you realize that many of these men did not commit one crime, but went back and back again?"

Wilcomb replied, "That's because society never gave them a chance. A lot of them started hanging around with guys like J. Edgar Hoover when they were young, and they never had an opportunity to learn right from wrong. Most of them played 'follow the leader.' If Hoover said, 'Let's break into a house,' they all followed him. If he said, 'Let's stick a bug in Martin Luther King's hotel room,' nobody questioned it. If he said, 'How about forging a letter?' everyone immediately sat down and started writing letters on unmarked paper. Maybe they were mischievous, but as Eirem Zimbalist once said, 'There is no such thing as a bad G-man.'"

"Wilcomb," I said, "I'm for rehabilitation providing the person has learned his lesson. But how can we be sure these black bag operators and break-in artists won't go back to their old tricks once you put them on the street again?"

"They won't if we teach them skills such as fingerprinting, filing and typing up reports. You don't just give up on a person because he once violated the law. I know many of these people, and they say they would like to make good if society would only give them a chance. But people in this country don't seem to want to rehabilitate FBI agents who went wrong; they want to punish them. Do you know what it would cost the taxpayer if we sent every FBI agent who committed a crime to prison? Millions of dollars. Why can't we use the same money to train them to be honest law enforcement officers?"

"I don't know," I said. "You're taking an awful chance."

Wilcomb admitted, "Sure, we'll have one or two backsliders, who would rather commit crime than do an honest day's work. I'm not saying the program will be 100 per cent successful. But if we can save even 60 per cent of these people, all of us will profit from it."

"I still think we should be tougher on people who commit crimes. But I'll say this for you, Wilcomb, your approach is a novel one, and while I can't support you financially I hope it works."

"Don't worry about the finances," he told me. "I'm hoping to get a grant from the Ford Foundation for a pilot program. We're going to have a halfway house where the courts will send us FBI agents who committed crimes. If we can succeed with rehabilitating this group, we may be able to persuade the Justice Department to drop charges against all the other G-men who went wrong."

There are two easy ways to get yourself set at four hearts. The first and simpler method is to cash dummy's ace and king of trumps at tricks two and three. You can ruff one spade, but when you try to get back to dummy, West will get the lead, cash his queen of trumps and leave you one trick short.

The more complicated way is to cash just one trump and dummy's second-high spade. Then you ruff a spade. West will overruff, put his partner in by underleading his ace of clubs and overruff you on the next spade.

A little care will prevent either of these unfortunate things from happening to you. Just lead a club at trick two. The best defense at this point is for the enemy to lead a second club and force dummy. Now you cash one high trump and go after spades. If West overruffs, he can't put his partner in. If he discards, you lead a diamond toward dummy's king and are home with all the marbles.

Ann Landers

Incest problems not uncommon

Dear Ann: I want to thank you for speaking out on the problem of incest. I've tried to alert as many mothers as possible to this growing menace but it's a delicate subject.

Some women are horrified but agree the problem should be faced squarely. Others turned red and changed the subject. A few have told me I have a filthy mind and such things happen only in "poor, low-class families."

One woman asked what I would do if my daughter was molested or sexually assaulted by a relative. I replied, "First, I'd attempt to find out from the child precisely what happened. Second, I'd call the family doctor and have the child examined. Then I'd call the police and get the dirty rat out of the house for good. After that I'd phone all the members of the family and warn them to keep their children away from that rotten animal if he should turn up."

Thank you for having the courage to deal with such frank material in your column, Ann. You do a wonderful service. — Color Me Grateful

Dear Grateful: Every mother should be alerted to the possibility of incest because it happens in the best of families.

Rather than call the police, however, I suggest a straightforward talk with the man and give him an alternative — psychiatric help or arrest. I would then make sure he is never left alone with children. Next I'd instruct the children to report any out-of-the-way behavior — and I'd be very explicit in describing what "out-of-the-way behavior" is. A second offense would mean packed clothes and a closed door.

Dear Ann Landers: I need someone to tell me what to do. I hope you can help. There isn't anyone I can talk to around here.

About a year ago I met a widower. We became close friends. After a very short time he became ill. I promised him when we started to go together that if anything happened to him I would stay at his side and take care of him.

I was his constant companion, nurse, cook, housekeeper and friend, until he passed away ten days ago.

When I learned I was not even mentioned in his will I was shocked and hurt. His children got everything. The man promised me he'd see to it that I was well provided for but he didn't keep his word.

Don't you think I am entitled to be paid for ten months of very hard work? What should I do? Does a person like me have any legal rights? If so, what are they? — True Friend Cheated.

Dear Friend: You need a lawyer, not Ann Landers. If you can't afford the regular fees, call Legal Aid.

Dear Ann Landers: The man I had a child by last year is getting married soon. We broke up while I was pregnant. He decided to marry his former girlfriend. I was told I'd get an invitation to the wedding. It came yesterday.

Should I go or stay away? I don't want people to think I wasn't invited — or worse yet, that I was too heartbroken to attend. On the other hand, I'd hate to look like a damned fool. I'll do as you say. — Miss ???

Dear ????: Deep down you'd be uncomfortable, no matter how hard you tried to appear nonchalant. My advice is stay home.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teenage Sex — Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

participation of Communists in the Italian government after next month's elections. However, they said the secretary repeated a general warning about the effect of Communists taking a role in Western governments.

Kissinger has said publicly such an event would weaken NATO and might cause a reassessment of the U.S. position on European defense.

Kissinger reportedly said that since the Soviets are strong, they are tempted to use their strength by the ideologists among them. He emphasized the importance of Western economic strength, noting that the main aid the Communist world has given to the poorer countries is military aid. There should never be another Angola, Kissinger reportedly said.

NATO secretary-general Joseph Luns also spoke to the meeting.

"It is not without some sadness that this meeting comes when NATO is strained by internal disputes on both its northern and southern flanks," Luns said.

The Greek-Turkish dispute over Cyprus is nearing its third year and Iceland and Great Britain are near a crisis over fishing rights.

State Department in favor of reactor sale to South Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has decided to support General Electric's request to sell two atomic power plants and 1.4 million pounds of enriched uranium fuel to South Africa, it was learned Thursday.

The controversial $2-billion sale is the first involving nuclear reactors for South Africa, which has not signed the nuclear nonproliferation treaty designed to prevent the spread of atomic weapons.

Fears have been expressed that some non-nuclear nations might make nuclear weapons from materials produced by the atomic plants.

State Department witnesses will tell the Senate African Affairs subcommittee next week that blocking the sale, which can be held up by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, or even to attach special restrictions would be unwise.

This is likely to touch off a fight on both technological and political grounds.

Some members of Congress are prepared to argue the sale would serve to undercut the Ford administration's newly declared policy of active support for the black majorities driving for political controls in southern Africa.

Other congressional sources said if the deal cannot be blocked there may be a move to prevent the Export-Import Bank from guaranteeing American bank loans to South Africa. Without such a financing arrangement, one of the sources said, the project would fall through.

State Department officials said they saw no inconsistency with administration efforts to further majority rule in South Africa.

"If you expect South Africa to play a role in helping to bring about negotiations in Rhodesia, you can't treat the South Africans as outcasts," said one official, who requested anonymity.

Besides, he said if the United States backs out South Africa will have no trouble buying power plants in Western Europe where safeguards are not likely to be as strict as those already common in U.S. export licenses.

Although South Africa has not signed the nonproliferation treaty, it has adhered to earlier nuclear agreements with the U.S. governing the supply of uranium fuel for research reactors and observed regulations favored by the International Atomic Energy Agency since 1965, department officials said.

Brown, who managed to gum up Carter's bandwagon a little by besting him in last Tuesday's Maryland primary, was regarded as Carter's strongest challenger in his home state of California and in neighboring Nevada.

Church, who beat Carter a week earlier in the Nebraska primary, was seen as a strong challenger in Oregon and Idaho, his home state.

After New York state chairman Rosenbaum's announcement of the delegate meeting, he was asked by a reporter if he was asking the delegation to support Ford.

Lehr critical of inspection job

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State Auditor George Lehr, critical of inspection and licensing procedures used by the state Bureau of Nursing Home Licensure, said Thursday problems in those areas could result in a danger to life.

"I don't think there's any question about it," Lehr said in releasing a five-year report on the Division of Health with emphasis on nursing home operations.

"And I think the lives on a day to day basis that are being shortened or lost cannot be calculated," Lehr added. "We found a great deal of noncompliance, a great number of unlicensed nursing homes and boarding homes."

But division officials claimed they have been checking nearly all nursing homes yearly and working closely with those not meeting standards to correct deficiencies.

Lehr said he felt rules and regulations for nursing home standards were adequate even if they were minimal.

"However, inefficient use of resources, both personnel and appropriations, combined with the apparent weakness in Missouri laws, have rendered the division unable to adequately administer and enforce their rules and regulations," the report said.

The auditor's criticisms followed closely those made a month ago by the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare in an audit of the Bureau of Nursing Home Licensure.

That report concentrated on the bureau's failure to totally enforce the life safety code for nursing homes. An inspection of five homes, selected at random, "disclosed numerous and serious deficiencies which had not been detected during the prior state agency inspections," the federal report said.

Both the federal government's report and that issued by Lehr called for more frequent inspections, improved inspection techniques to improve efficiency and increased supervision of inspectors.

Keating to head local campaign

Local attorney Tom Keating has been named Pettis County chairman of the Richard Rabbitt for lieutenant governor campaign, it was announced Wednesday afternoon by Rabbitt.

Rabbitt addressed a noon luncheon at the Ramada Inn.

Noting that he and Keating were both first elected to the Missouri House in 1960, Rabbitt added, "I am extremely pleased that Tom has agreed to take on the position of campaign chairman for me in Pettis County. I feel certain that with Tom working on my campaign, we will carry Pettis County by a wide margin in August and again in November."

Keating served two terms in the legislature.

Circus time

The circus came to Sedalia Thursday as the Noon Day Optimist Club sponsored the Mid-America Circus on the State Fairgrounds. Of course, the clowns provided the most fun for the youngsters. Vol. 108, No. 102

Sedalia, Mo., Friday, May 21, 1976

20 Pages—Fifteen Cents

Consumer prices jump .4% in April

WASHINGTON (AP) — Led by the first rise in retail food costs in four months, consumer prices increased four-tenths of a per cent in April, the government said today.

The increase was the biggest price rise since January and was twice as large as the March increase of two-tenths of a per cent. However, it still was well within the Ford administration's prediction for an over-all 6 per cent increase in prices during all of 1976.

The Labor Department said the price of food rose six-tenths of a per cent during April, the first rise since a six-tenths of a per cent rise in December. Food prices had declined during the first three months of 1976 by a total of 2 per cent.

There were higher prices during April for fresh fruits and vegetables, coffee, pork, poultry and dairy products. The price of beef fell six-tenths of a per cent, but the decline was smaller than in the previous two months.

At the White House, President Ford said the April figures were "a little higher than March but it does show the rate of inflation is on a downward trend."

He said the consumer price report and an announcement that the nation's Gross National Product increased during the first quarter at an annual rate of 8.5 per cent were "extremely good news. It shows economic activity is moving faster than we anticipated."

The department said the Consumer Price Index stood at 168.2 in April, meaning that goods which cost $100 in a base period in 1967 cost $168.20 last month.

The rise in consumer prices in the 12-month period ending in April was 6.1 per cent, substantially below the 12-month increase a year ago when prices had risen 10.2 per cent. During the last three months, consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 2.9 per cent, a low rate that most economists believe cannot be maintained for long.

On a negative note, the Labor Department said the buying power of workers, paychecks fell nine-tenths of a per cent during April, the biggest monthly decline since November 1974 during the depths of the recession.

The agency said the drop was due to a combination of price increases, a decrease in average weekly hours worked and no change in average hourly earnings.

However, workers' spendable earnings still were up 3.8 per cent for the 12-month period ending in April.

Food prices actually declined by 2 per cent during the January-March period. The Agriculture Department this week had additional good news for consumers, saying the over-all increase for food prices this year might be between 2 and 5 per cent, which would be the smallest annual increase in four years.

Economists, however, are more concerned about the trend in industrial goods, since food prices are considered volatile and not indicative of the overall inflation rate.

Prices for commodities other than food increased during the first three months at an annual rate of nearly 4 per cent.

Hearings scheduled on block grant programs

Two public hearings to inform citizens on the status of the city's application for federal Community Development Block Grant Program funds — which looks like it will be pared down considerably — will be held at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. next Friday in the Municipal Building council chambers.

Tom Delph, executive director of the program, Friday said the city's original request of $400,000 in funds has been lowered by program officials to approximately $275,000. This reduced figure, Delph emphasized, has only received tentative approval.

The fund-requests that have been initially approved are: $26,500 for salaries of the administrator and a code-enforcer and general office supplies; $100,000 for installing plumbing in homes, otherwise refurbishing dwellings or demolishing condemned structures; $90,000 for installing sewers and street lights and constructing sidewalks; $38,500 for improvements at Hubbard Park, and $20,000 for cleaning up blighted areas.

The funds can only be spent in designated "impact areas" of the city which, in the opinion of local and federal officials, need the improvements most. Most of the local impact area is bounded roughly on the north by the city limits, on the west by Highway 65, on the east by the city limits and on the south by Broadway. Another section of the area is in the southeast part of the city near the city limits.

Projects not approved included: $25,000 for economic development; $25,000 for sidewalk construction in the downtown area; $15,000 for re-roofing the senior citizens center; and $60,000 for home rehabilitation projects.

The city, during the first year of this program, received $300,000 for various community improvement projects. This year's funds, if approved, will not be received until around September.

Kissinger says he coordinates policy

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger insisted today that he coordinates all foreign policy decisions with President Ford despite any "mumbling" to the contrary in the White House.

As an example, Kissinger told a news conference that before his recent Africa trip he went over all the points he intended to make with the President and briefed all concerned members of the President's staff.

"That does not mean that there may not be somebody without anything to do with foreign affairs mumbling something in the corridors of the White House," he said.

Kissinger's comments were his latest rebuttal to attacks on him and his foreign policies by candidates in the presidential campaign. The secretary spoke at the conclusion of the semiannual meeting of North Atlantic alliance foreign ministers.

The 1½-day meeting ended with a reaffirmation of the ministers' commitment to "deterrent and defensive strength."

"Only if the security of the peoples of the alliance is guaranteed in this way can East-West relations continue to improve," the ministers said in a joint statement.

Diplomatic sources said the conference communique strongly reflected Kissinger's views, expressed in his address to the council Thursday.

On other topics, the statement: —Expressed hope for a satisfactory U.S.-Soviet agreement on strategic arms limitation. Diplomats emerging from behind the closed doors told newsmen that Kissinger had little progress to report on SALT.

—Voiced concern about the serious situation caused by the continued instability in the Middle East. The ministers said rapid progress must be made toward a just and lasting settlement.

The ministers made no official mention of Africa, although it was reportedly discussed at some length in the morning session.

Jury determines moment of death at murder trial

BOSTON (AP) — A jury decided that a clubbing victim died when his brain died — three days before doctors unplugged his respirator — and convicted a Boston teen-ager of first-degree murder.

If Thursday's verdict is upheld on appeal, Massachusetts will be the only state in the nation in which a jury, not the legislature, has determined the moment of death, said Chief Superior Court Justice Walter H. McLaughlin.

McLaughlin presided over the murder trial of Siegfried Golston, 18, who was accused of hitting Ronald J. Salem, 34, of Medford, on the head with a baseball bat last Aug. 24. McLaughlin sentenced Golston to life in prison.

Machines kept Salem breathing and his heart beating for a week after the clubbing, but doctors who treated him testified he suffered brain death and died "as a person" on the fourth day.

At least 16 pupils pregnant at public schools this year

A total of 13 Smith-Cotton High School students and possibly four others are or have been pregnant during the school year, which ends next week, Principal Kem Keithly reported in a written statement to Superintendent of Schools Dr. Allan Henningsen.

In addition, Junior High School Principal Larry Smithson reported three known pregnancies this year at his school.

At a May 11 school board meeting, when the pregnancy issue was first brought up by Mrs. Lynn Block, Route 2, who termed it of "epidemic" proportions, it was initially reported that between six and eight girls were pregnant at Smith-Cotton this year. At the request of the board Keithly conducted an investigation of the situation and discovered the number was higher than originally thought.

Keithly also noted two other students quit school to get married and are "supposedly pregnant, but we have no confirmation."

Of the 17 high school students who have been or are presently pregnant, only three are married. The group includes four freshmen, three sophomores, five juniors and five seniors ranging in age from 15 to 19. A majority of the students — nine — were 17 years old. All of them are still presently enrolled in school.

As of May 12, Keithly reported, 13 of the students are still pregnant and four have delivered. One of the infants was either still born or died shortly after birth.

Questioned by Mrs. Block at last week's board meeting, Keithly confirmed that one high school student began labor in a classroom and had to be taken to the hospital.

Keithly also noted 10 of the 17 students were white and seven black. One of the students transferred into Smith-Cotton pregnant, he added.

Henningsen Friday termed the pregnancy statistics "average for a community the size of Sedalia with the divergent population that we serve," adding: "I don't think it is high by any means."

He also quoted figures from one expert in this field who stated 10 per cent of the 17-year-old girls in the United States are mothers and that 16 per cent of this group have at least two children. The total number of pregnancy cases this year constitutes about 2 per cent of the high school enrollment, he said.

No details regarding the three known junior high pregnancy cases were included in the report, a copy of which was obtained by The Democrat-Capital.

'More jobs' spearheads platform of Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several months of hearings by the Democratic platform committee leave little doubt that jobs will be the spearhead of the party's 1976 platform.

"I think there was a unanimity on the subject of jobs," Gov. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, committee chairman, said Thursday at the end of a 4-day round of the hearings.

"I certainly think that was a general theme that emerged from the testimony of virtually all the witnesses," Anderson said.

One committee source said the drafting subcommittee is pretty much agreed to include a "full employment" plank when it begins writing the platform here June 11.

Although no formula has been agreed on, the leading model endorsed by most, after witness was pending legislation to cut employment by more than half, sponsored by Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota and Rep. Augustus Hawkins of California.

The legislation would set a national goal of 3 per cent unemployment after four years and use various incentives to encourage private employment. It would guarantee government jobs as a last resort to reach the 3 per cent goal.

The drafting subcommittee, which will present its draft of the platform to the Democratic National Convention in July, is heavy with supporters of presidential contender Jimmy Carter.

However, Carter sent a telegram saying he does "not intend to attempt to dictate the substance of the Democratic platform."

Murray H. Finley, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, and one of the last witnesses, echoed many who had spoken before him when he asked the committee to address "what I believe is this nation's most pressing issue — high and prolonged joblessness among America's workers."

Discussing Ratchford's future?

MU curators meet behind closed doors Bulletin

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — University of Missouri President C. Bruce Ratchford resigned today following several weeks of controversy over a proposed lobbying plan for the university.

President John H. Dalton of the Board of Curators announced the board had accepted Ratchford's resignation. The announcement came after a four-hour closed session.

Dalton said an interim president will be named later and A.G. Unklesbay, the university's vice president for administration, will serve as the university's chief executive until that time.

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The curators of the University of Missouri met behind closed doors today, but the reason for the rare session remained undisclosed.

All nine members of the board were present when the meeting opened. Also attending were the university's legal counsel and President C. Bruce Ratchford. While the reason for the meeting called earlier this week was not disclosed, speculation was high that it would deal with Ratchford's future as president.

John H. Dalton, president of the board, said the secret session would be "within the exceptions" permitted by the state's open meetings law, limiting it to a discussion of personnel, legal and certain scholastic matters.

The entire area on the third floor of the Student Union Building where the curators met, including the hallway, was cordoned off by university security officials.

Dalton said an announcement would be made following the session.

Ratchford has been under intensifying fire for more than a month following disclosure of a controversial "state relations plan" outlining proposed lobbying activities to be carried on in behalf of the four-campus university system.

The plan, disclosed in mid-April but dated December 1975, set out goals for this year intended to "obtain and maintain state government support for the University."

After more than two weeks of debate over the issue, Ratchford said on May 3 he would be taking a brief vacation because "the strain of the last few weeks has been considerable." Earlier this week he attended a meeting in Lincoln, Neb., was in his office briefly Wednesday and has since then resumed his vacation.

Although there had been reports earlier in the month that the school's 15th president planned to resign before the end of May, Ratchford has continually refused to comment.

Faculty members at the Columbia campus, in the wake of the plan's disclosure, voted in late April to ask the curators to remove Ratchford.

The vote was 610-255. But two weeks earlier, the Intercampus Faculty Council composed of faculty members from each of the four campuses, adopted a resolution supporting the president.

Hijacking

Six men described as Moslem tribesmen hijacked a Philippines Airlines jet with more than 100 persons aboard today, forced it to land at Zamboanga and demanded $375,000 ransom and a flight to Libya. The hijacking was the third in the Philippines this year and fourth in seven months.

Graduates appear in Sunday's paper

More than 300 pictures of Smith-Cotton High School's 1976 graduation candidates will be featured in a special section to be published this Sunday by The Democrat-Capital. Pictures of the graduates of Sacred Heart High School also will be included.

There were several S-C students who did not submit pictures for publication, however their names are also included in the section.

Watch for this special salute to Sedalia's graduating seniors this Sunday.

Religious stances of presidential candidates are drawing attention

NEW YORK (AP) — In a time of widespread disenchantment at lapses of ethics in government, rising attention is being centered on the religious stances of candidates for the U.S. presidential nomination.

Reaction to it has been variously disturbed, approving or puzzled.

The special concern about it is attributed to diverse factors—to worries about recent derelictions in public affairs, to current campaign styles, notably that of Jimmy Carter, or to a turning against a secularizing tide in American culture to reclaim spiritual values.

In any case, the religious note is an escalating element in the presidential contest, stirring discussion among pundits, politicians, church leaders and people.

Not since the late John F. Kennedy became in 1960 the first Roman Catholic to gain the presidency has religion surfaced so strongly in a presidential campaign. But this time, the issue is not so much denominational ties as individually voiced commitment.

It's a "new situation," says the Rev. James M. Wall, editor of the influential ecumenical weekly, Christian Century. Generally, he says, it has been "assumed that religious references by public officials were not to be taken seriously. But now, our leading candidates are clearly not joking. They mean it."

The reference specifically was to Democratic candidate Carter, a Southern Baptist of explicitly devout belief, and to President Gerald Ford, an Episcopalian, also of a personally evangelical, though more subdued, bent. Several others in the running also espouse strong religious convictions.

What's troubling some secular political analysts is their assumption that the "safest bet for president" should really not be "religious enough to count," says Wall, a Methodist, who headed Carter's successful Illinois primary campaign.

Here, briefly, are religious connections of leading candidates:

Republican Ronald Reagan, a member of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), once a Sunday school teacher and who now attends Bellaire Presbyterian Church in Los Angeles, an evangelically oriented congregation.

A "knowledgeable Christian" with an "alive faith," pastor Donn Moomaw says of him. Reagan's wife, Nancy, says he prays before every major decision. He told a Christian group in Florida the country "is in need of and ready for spiritual revival," urged believers to join in reclaiming the nation's Judeo-Christian heritage, and added:

"As a Christian, I commit myself to do my share in this joint venture."

President Ford, a life-long Episcopalian, who usually attends St. John's Episcopal Church, across the park from the executive mansion. His is a quiet faith, a "personal thing," he says, which "I rely on for guidance from my God."

His son, Michael, is a seminarian. The President's close spiritual advisor, Michigan evangelist Billy Zoli, sends the President a weekly memo of spiritual guidance. The President has written him:

"Because I've trusted Christ to be my Savior, my life is His."

Ford says "man's wisdom and strength are not sufficient" and that he seeks to heed Proverbs 3:5-6: "Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and do not rely on your own insight. In all your ways acknowledge Him, and He will make straight your paths."

Carter, a Baptist deacon in his home church in Plains, Ga., says he has been a Christian since he was 8, but had a "born-again" experience of recommitment in 1967.

"The most important thing in my life is Jesus Christ," he says. "I turn to Him in prayer daily and before every decision I have to make which affects the life of others. I don't want anything that's not God's will for my life."

Among other Democrats, Alabama's George Wallace is a Methodist who speaks often of the "grace and goodness of God" and says "Jesus Christ saves"; Sen. Henry M. Jackson, a Presbyterian, one-time Sunday school teacher, who terms himself a "deeply religious man."

Sen. Morris K. Udall, reared a Mormon but who left the church because it bars blacks from the priesthood and who says "I consider myself a religious person" but without organizational ties.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., a Roman Catholic, former Jesuit seminarian who quotes freely from church scholars; Sen. Frank Church, a Presbyterian who calls for renewed dedication of Biblical principles of integrity; Sen. Hubert Humphrey, a United Church of Christ member, active in church affairs, who says Judeo-Christian influences built the nation and have spearheaded its social gains.

Jimmy Carter outspoken about his convictions

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A lot of news analysts "are mystified" by Jimmy Carter's religious convictions, he says. "I don't think they doubt my sincerity, but they just don't understand. I don't make a big issue out of it, but neither do I hesitate to say publicly that the most important thing in my life is Jesus Christ."

That outspoken candor about it, a characteristic of the evangelical element in American Christianity, has seemed odd to some more reserved church adherents as well as to secular commentators, but it strikes a familiar chord in broad reaches of U.S. religious life.

"There is a hidden religious power base in American culture which our secular biases prevent many of us from noticing," writes Roman Catholic philosopher Michael Novak of Bayville, N.Y. "Jimmy Carter has found it."

That extensive base is doctrinally traditional, evangelical sector of the country's churches, and it's a big one, estimated at from 30 million to 40 million of the nation's 132 million church members, about half the 80 million Protestants, a major segment of all mainline denominations, and a dominant part of some of them.

Although the open religious style may seem strange to some Northeasterners, it's a common quality in the country's heartland churches, in the Far West, and particularly in the South, bastion of the nation's biggest Protestant body, the 12-million Southern Baptists, including Carter, who is regarded as the front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Jim Newton of Memphis, Tenn., editor of World Mission Journal, published by the Southern Baptist Brotherhood Commission of which Carter is a trustee, recently did a taped interview on a campaign plane trip with him about his religious attitudes.

Asked how he handled questions about being a "born-again" Christian, he said, "It's very difficult for anyone who has not had that experience to understand... Many of the newsmen who asked about this have never had this experience. Some of them are downright cynical about it. I think it worries some of them."

"I just explain my own spiritual experience openly and honestly. When I was first asked this question, I had to decide how I was going to respond with the same kind of openness and honesty to this question that I would to any question."

Consequently, he adds, he explains that although he had been a church member since childhood, about 10 years ago, in 1967, he sensed some void in his spiritual life, that he was "missing something important," and began praying about it, discussing it with others, including his sister, evangelist Ruth Carter Stapleton, on a long walk in the woods near his home.

"I had a personal spiritual experience that is difficult to explain to people who have never had such an experience," he went on. "I began to grow. I participated in several pioneer mission efforts in areas where Southern Baptist work is relatively new... I became uniquely aware of the Holy Spirit as an integral part of my life. I learned that I cannot depend on myself for every need and to solve every problem..."

Vietnamese churches are seeking help

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — An interdenominational delegation of church leaders has returned from a two-week visit to Vietnam, saying churches there are vigorous, and urging U.S. help for rebuilding the war-torn country.

"Such devastation has been brought to that nation that it is imperative that the government of the United States respond with symbolic and substantial help," says United Methodist Bishop James A. Armstrong of Aberdeen, S.D., one of the six-member delegation.

Grant to church

NEW YORK (AP) — A $50,000 Ford Foundation grant has been made to the communications office of the United Church of Christ to continue its eight-year-old program to combat racial discrimination in broadcasting.

"I feel my limitations more intensely. I used to deny my limitations and conceal them. Now I am much easier in my relations with other people and with God." But he added that his frankness about his faith has puzzled some secular commentators. "Some have been quizzical, some doubtful, some defensive."

While other candidates, both in this campaign and in the past, have espoused religious faith, the difference often cited is that their expression of it usually is broadly amorphous, in contrast to Carter's "specificity" — a common trait of the evangelical wing of U.S. Christianity.

That religious style, however, often is caricatured in the Northeast by "stereotypes and false images" of literature, such as Sinclair Lewis' Elmer Gantry, observed Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, interreligious director of the American Jewish Committee.

In that sense, he adds, the evangelical Christian in the presidential race can become the object of the same sort of prejudice that faced the late John F. Kennedy about his Roman Catholicism — a tendency to fear and distrust the unfamiliar and unknown.

However, in many American settings, such as a recent gospel-singing meeting in Indianapolis, where other more formally religious politicians might have felt stiff and aloof, Carter was right at home, clapping his hands, tapping his foot, joining in what for many is the familiar, old evangelical spirit.

Final sermon next weekend

The Rev. Fred Hueners, 3001 West 11th, pastor at Christ Lutheran Church for the past five years, will preach his final sermon in Sedalia May 30.

He will then move with his family to Kansas City, where he will take a 11-week course in clinical pastoral education. He then plans to enroll at Luther Seminary, St. Paul, Minn., and complete requirements for a doctorate of ministry degree.

While in Sedalia, Mr. Hueners has served as chairman of the Open Door Service Center Board of Directors and chairman of the Pettis County Council on Aging.

Provincial administration is planned

CHICAGO, Ill. (AP) — Archbishop Iakovos, primate of the Greek Orthodox Church in North and South America, has initiated steps here for decentralizing authority in the body of 2 million members.

The plan, already tentatively approved by the Ecumenical Patriarchate of Constantinople under which the church functions, would shift from collective over-all direction to provincial administration under eight regional bishops, in accordance with joint guidelines.

A report of the change, expected to be implemented by Jan. 1, 1977, will be made at the church's biennial Clergy-Laity Congress in Philadelphia July 2-9.

Leftists stall on new truce

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Bolstered by pledges of support from radical Arab states, leftist Moslem forces delayed action today on a new truce to end Lebanon's civil war.

Hisham Shaar, general director of internal security, said that the number of dead reported by police from nearly 14 months of warfare exceeds 25,000, with 79,000 wounded.

He said this terrible toll did not indicate casualties among Palestinian refugees or Palestinian guerrillas fighting with the Moslem forces.

Scattered fighting was reported between Moslem and Christian militias overnight, including battles with rockets and mortars around Moslem enclaves in the Christian-held half of Beirut. Police said the clashes killed at least 23 persons.

The over-all leader of the Moslem militants, Kamal Jumblatt, scheduled a meeting with Lebanese leftists, Palestinians and delegates of radical Arab states, calling it the Arab Front for Participation in the Palestinian Resistance.

They were to discuss the Moslem-leftist posture toward a cease-fire plan proposed by President-elect Elias Sarkis.

Jumblatt's position was strengthened by, strong new expressions of support from Iraq and Algeria.

Aly Ghannam, member of the ruling Iraqi Baath party's national command, arrived in Beirut for the front meeting and said Iraq "supports the Lebanese nationalist movement and protection of the Palestinian resistance."

Algerian envoy Mohammed Yazid returned to Beirut Thursday and delivered a message of support to Jumblatt from Algerian President Houari Boumedienne.

Arabs clash with Israelis almost daily

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops man the castle-like walls of Jerusalem, firing tear gas at roving demonstrators. Black smoke hangs over Arab towns, where swarms of children light protest bonfires of oil-soaked tires.

Soldiers patrol in armored cars, firing warning shots skyward. Arab students pelt them with stones and chant: "In blood and fire we will redeem our land."

Arab demonstrations and clashes with Israeli troops have become almost daily rituals in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Ten Palestinian Arabs have died in four months of riots, and Israel is worried about the backlash.

To reduce the bloodshed, the Israeli Ministry of Defense has issued tear gas to troops accustomed to only live ammunition and is considering the use of rubber bullets.

Israeli officials admit that the clashes have stirred growing sympathy for the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) among the West Bank's 670,000 Arabs. But authoritative sources concede there is no sign that the demonstrations have been fomented by the PLO.

The demonstrations began last autumn and intensified in February when a court ruling, later repealed, permitted Jews to worship at religious sites revered by both Moslems and Jews but in Moslem zones.

Arabs accuse the Jews of trying to take over their mosques on the holy Temple Mount in Jerusalem, and they are angry at Jewish settlements being built on the West Bank.

Great ball of fire

Firemen begin mop-up operations at the former United States pavillion at the Expo '67 site in Montreal after a flash fire Thursday destroyed the geodesic dome's acrylic skin, leaving only the aluminum skeleton. One man was reported missing after the fire. Photographer Doug Lehman happened to be taking aerial photos when the fire broke (right). It took just 10 minutes for the entire covering to burn.

Problem at junior high school

Leak dispute may be settled

The Board of Education appeared to have mended fences with Gentges Roofing Co., Kansas City, Thursday night in an effort to seal a leak in the junior high school.

Gentges is the sub-contractor that put the roof on the junior high school. Only $1,000 remains in payments to the firm, however the board has refused to make that final payment until a leak in the cafeteria roof is repaired.

Robert Bessen, administrator with Gentges, said he inspected the building following recent rains and found no leak in the cafeteria, except for a ten-foot area of carpet dampened by rain near a west wall of the gymnasium.

According to Bessen, this leak is caused by the loosening of flashing. He agreed to repair the flashing at no charge, provided his company is paid the final $1,000.

During discussion of the issue, William Schimpf, secretary-treasurer for Gentges, quoted a letter from architect Don Buller stating that the leak does not appear to be a roof problem. Bessen said water appears to be coming through some skylights. However, Gentges had nothing to do with installation of the skylights, Bessen noted.

Buller did not attend the meeting. He had been invited to make a report on the junior high.

"I think the board would act differently if it had a copy of this letter," Kell stated, in reference to the letter mentioned by Bessen.

The board passed a motion that Gentges be paid the $1,000 provided Buller submits a letter to the board stating that the problem is not in the roof, but explaining where the leak is occurring.

A measure to continue the gifted student program that allows students with special academic talents to spend one hour out of the school day working on a special project in lieu of a normal class work was passed. The program will also be extended to the junior high school.

In other action, the board approved a tentative priority schedule for building repairs throughout the school system. Repairs range from tuck pointing on some buildings to installation of shelves at school cafeterias. A final proposal will be submitted in the district budget request. Dr. Allan Henningsen, superintendent of schools, said the administration is working with a tentative budget figure of $5,885,000 for all school costs in fiscal 1977, some $85,000 over last year.

Crash victim critical; fund is set up here

COLUMBIA — One of two Sedalia teenagers injured Tuesday night in a one-car accident in which another youth was killed lapsed into critical condition late Thursday afternoon here at the University of Missouri Medical Center, a spokesman said.

Gene A. Steele, 14, 316 East Chestnut, was listed in critical condition at the hospital as of 5:20 p.m. Thursday.

His brother, Kurt C. Steele, 16, of the same address, remained in serious condition, the spokesman said.

Both Steele brothers had suffered severe head injuries and possible internal injuries as a result of the crash. The spokesman would not discuss the details of the boys' condition or whether any emergency medical treatment was planned.

Kurt Steele was driving his father's car Tuesday evening with his brother and Randy W. Groshans, 16, 601 East Boonville, on Route HH near Route EE just north of Sedalia when he apparently lost control of the car. The car overturned a number of times before coming to rest some 800 feet from where it first left the road.

The Groshans boy was killed in the crash.

A fund for the Steele family has been set up at Missouri State Bank.

"The children wanted to do something for the family," said Mrs. Charles Trelow, whose daughter, Debbie, is a classmate of Kurt Steele.

Debbie, a sophomore at Smith-Cotton High School, and Pam Menefee, an S-C junior, went from class to class Thursday and collected $106.16 which was deposited into the fund Friday morning.

Mrs. Trelow also reported that Charles Trelow, Gary Spiess and David Silvey, eighth graders at Sedalia Junior High, were planning a similar campaign Friday.

Contributions to the Wray Steele family fund will be accepted at either of Missouri State Bank's locations, Tenth and Limit or Broadway and Thompson Blvd.

Mayoral candidate will be selected

City Democratic committeemen and women will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday night in the Pettis County Courthouse Assembly Room to choose a nominee for mayor, it was announced Friday.

Only committeemen and women will be permitted to vote on the various candidates for the party's nomination to succeed outgoing Mayor Jerry Jones, who will soon officially resign and move to Columbia.

A meeting of city GOP committeemen and women to select a nominee to succeed Jones, a Republican, has not been scheduled.

Meyer disqualifies self from hearing

Judge Phillip Cook, Saline County Circuit Court, was named by the Missouri Supreme Court to hear the case of DeWayne R. Hedrick, 27, Marceline, Mo., who is charged with the Feb. 7 burglary of the Looney-Bloss Lumber Co., Main and Washington.

Judge Frank Meyer disqualified himself from hearing the case after Hedrick charged that Meyer was prejudiced.

In other Circuit Court action Thursday, Donald Ray Wiseman, 19, 807 West Main, was given a six month suspended sentence and placed on two years probation.

Wiseman pled guilty to charges of stealing over $50 in connection with the theft of three rifles Jan. 9 from a truck belonging to Harry D. Meyer, Hughesville.

Priesmeyer is arraigned; free on bond

Leonard Priesmeyer, 35, 822 North Grand, was formally arraigned in Pettis County Magistrate Court Thursday on one felony count of stealing over $50 and later released after he posted $20,000 bond.

Earlier, Priesmeyer posted $15,000 bond in Saline County on six charges of stealing over $50.

Priesmeyer is charged in Pettis County with stealing a quantity of frozen meat from Pettis County Refrigerated Locker System, 800 West Main, in January, 1975.

The arrest of Priesmeyer and four other persons last month broke up a theft ring operating in Pettis and Saline Counties, law enforcement officials reported.

Lawrence Priesmeyer, 34, 703 East 13th, Leonard's brother, is charged in Saline County with one count of stealing over $50. Their brother, Orlean Gene Priesmeyer, 30, Marshall, is charged in Saline County with one count of receiving stolen property and one count in Lafayette County of stealing over $50. Orlean's wife, Karen Jeanette Priesmeyer, 25, is charged with one count in Saline County with receiving stolen property. The fifth person, Fred (Sonny) Weathers, 30, Houstonia, is charged in Saline County with one count of stealing over $50.

Both Leonard Priesmeyer and Weathers are free on bond. The other three Priesmeyers remain in the Saline County jail in lieu of bond.

Court hears disclosure arguments

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The grounds for a court decision throwing out portions of the economic disclosure provisions of the state's campaign finance law no longer exist because of action by the Missouri Elections Commission, according to that panel's attorney.

Howard Sachs told the Missouri Supreme Court Thursday that a commission ruling in February resolved the question of discriminatory treatment of political candidates in disclosure requirements merely because of their business situation.

But Arthur Benson, representing two Kansas City attorneys who won their challenge of the disclosure sections before Jackson County Circuit Court Judge Paul Vardeman, questioned the power of the commission to resolve such questions through its rule-making and opinion powers.

Benson also told the seven-member court that even if that power exists a commission decision is not irreversible and it is up to the court to make the ultimate determination.

The court took the appeal under advisement, but Chief Justice Robert Seiler promised a quick decision in light of the fact that the first disclosure reports for candidates in the Aug. 3 primary are due June 24.

The case is only one of several court challenges to parts or all of the new campaign law, which was adopted by a 4-1 margin by the voters in 1974 after a successful initiative petition drive to put it on the ballot.

Vardeman held that disclosure provisions calling for most candidates to report income sources over $100 while members of professional partnerships such as attorneys and doctors, report income sources over $500 violated the equal protection provisions of the U.S. Constitution.

The commission, through a series of complex advisory opinions, tried to resolve that issue and several others.

Sachs contended, however, that even if no commission action had occurred, there would be no constitutional violation because candidates' decision to be involved in certain types of business ventures that carry different reporting requirements, are voluntary.

Anti-busing offensive

Ford denies political motive

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford, denying that his offensive against court-ordered school busing is connected with upcoming primary elections, is considering ways to use federal money to help school districts avoid extensive busing administration sources say.

Ford is also considering seeking new legislation as part of "a whole range of approaches" to limit the use of busing as a desegregation tool, according to a White House source.

The source declined to give details on how federal funds could be used to reduce busing ordered by federal courts.

Though officials are reviewing administrative and legislative proposals to curb busing, the first action in the Ford campaign will come on the judicial front if Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi decides to use the Boston school case as a vehicle for seeking new Supreme Court guidelines on busing.

Levi was to explain his views on government intervention in the Boston case at a meeting with Ford Friday afternoon. Justice Department spokesman Robert Havel said Levi had reached no decision as of late Thursday and that he may not do so until after the session with Ford.

Meeting with a group of visiting reporters from Kentucky on Thursday, Ford suggested the test case could even be made in Louisville, where busing orders led to racial unrest last fall.

Ford's decision to seek alternatives to busing became known as he prepared for a Republican primary campaign in Kentucky where he is considered to be well behind challenger

Ronald Reagan in the drive for the state's 37 delegates.

But Ford denied he was scratching for political gains in the Kentucky primary, telling the Kentucky newsmen he had asked Levi and HEW Secretary David Matthews last November "to find a better answer, a better remedy to quality education, because court-ordered forced busing is not the answer."

The President told the Kentucky visitors he is considering three alternatives to busing, suggested several months ago by the Justice Department and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Ford declined to discuss details, but administration sources said the proposals include both the use of increased federal funds and new legislation strengthening the "Esch amendment," which requires that busing be imposed only as a last resort.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis expressed no enthusiasm at the prospect of the Justice Department entering the Boston case, suggesting it would make more sense for Levi to look at school districts just beginning to desegregate.

"Nothing the Justice Department does can affect the opening of schools next September," Dukakis said.

Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., and members of the Congressional Black Caucus have also urged Levi not to back antibusing forces in Boston.

Brooke said Justice Department backing of anti-busing factions would "encourage violence and unrest in the city. It would encourage one side and depress another side."

Export forecast revised downward

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The value of farm exports is expected to be a record of $21.9 billion this fiscal year, slightly more than 1974-75 shipments worth $21.6 billion but less than the Agriculture Department predicted three months ago.

In February, the department estimated this season's farm exports at $22.1 billion. Last November USDA forecast shipments would reach $22.7 billion.

Thus, in six months the value of farm exports has been eroded by $800 million. The decline, USDA said Thursday, stems from a slide in prices for some important commodities.

The value of grain and feed exports this fiscal year is expected to make up $11.8 billion of the total business. Last November the department forecast those sales at $13 billion and in February revised them downward to $12.5 billion.

In its latest report, the department's Outlook and Situation Board said that "declining unit prices, coupled with an over-all slowing of demand for wheat" have been responsible for the slide in grain and feed export prospects.

The export value decline can be traced back to what has happened at the farm where cash prices of wheat, corn, soybeans and some other products are substantially lower now than they were before the full impact of last year's bumper harvests were felt in the market.

On a quantity basis, however, farm exports are setting records this season. The report said the volume of major bulk commodities is expected to be more than 100 million metric tons, up about 20 per cent from last year and slightly more than the previous high set in 1973-74. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

Expected record feed grain, wheat and soybean exports will create the increase, the report said. "These commodities will make up about 90 per cent of the total tonnage of exports."

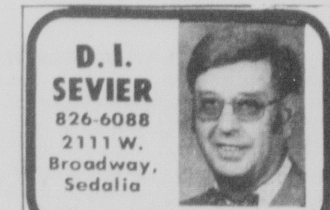

However, the report cautioned that if the full-year export value of $21.9 billion is reached shipments during the April-June quarter will have to be worth more than $5.3 billion. That would compare with $4.74 billion in the first quarter of the year which began last July 1; $6.22 billion in the second, and $5.58 billion in the third.

Major uncertainties for exports during the last quarter of the year are the schedule of shipments to the USSR and the pace of (Food for Peace) shipments, the report said.

The Soviet Union has bought additional grain recently but actual deliveries of some will be spread through September, three months after the department's fiscal year calculations end on June 30.

In reviewing overseas markets for farm products this year, the report said Japan, traditionally the largest market, is expected to take $3.1 billion — about 14 per cent of the total — worth of U.S. farm products this year, down from more than $3.2 billion in 1974-75.

Officials said the volume of shipments to Japan this year will include an 11 per cent increase in the amount of feed grains and a 27 per cent boost in soybeans from last season.

Hens set record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's hens are continuing a major egg-laying effort this spring, according to the Agriculture Department.

The rate of lay on May 1 at 65.1 eggs per 100 layers was a record level for that date, the department's Crop Reporting Board said Thursday. "This is the second consecutive month for a record rate of lay."

The May 1 egg-laying flock totaled 270.1 million birds, a decline of 1 per cent from a year earlier, the report said.

Sweet Springs grads challenged by Litton

David Pomerence

Randal D. Charles

SWEET SPRINGS — A class of 59 students and U. S. Congressman Jerry Litton drew a full house at Sweet Springs R-VII High School commencement exercises Monday night at the new Mid-School.

Litton, congressman for Missouri's Sixth District, challenged the graduates to "get back to American basics: honesty, truth, decency and hard work." Citing the economic situation, Litton said, "America is facing many problems today. Labor is uppermost, demanding more and more pay, with no effort to give more service or increasing production."

He pointed out that the class of 1976 was the first in many years not to be faced with war or mandatory draft. Litton said they should "dig deep to find that self-assurance that helps them to succeed in their chosen field."

David Pomerence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Pomerence, delivered the valedictorian address. Active in football, basketball and the Future Farmers of America, Pomerence also was a member of the National Honor Society and music and science clubs. As a recipient of a Curator's Scholarship, he plans to study agricultural engineering at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Randal D. Charles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lynol Charles, was the class' salutatorian. Active in FFA, basketball and baseball while in high school, he was also a member of NHS, Annual Staff, music and science clubs. As a recipient of several scholarships, including the Caroline Ullman teaching scholarship and Saline County Teachers scholarship, Charles will attend UMC.

Wailin' and pickin' with Willie Nelson and the boys

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
AUSTIN, Tex. — (NEA) — The boys were out at the Soap Creek Saloon, off of Bee Caves Road, up a gravel drive full of boulders bigger than ostrich eggs.

They were standing around and pickin' and wailin'.

There were Willie Nelson and Charlie Pride, Pee Wee King and Floyd Tillman — enough country music talent to fill the Grand Ole Opry a couple of times over.

"How do you like it here on an off night?" asked Darrell Royal, who was drinking a beer with the rest of the good old boys. (Later they would all repair to Darrell's place in town for some pickin' into the daylight hours of the morning.)

There is no clock on pickin' — which for you uninitiated means jamming with guitars.

Willie Nelson was over in Galveston the other week at a pickin' session when streaks of sun began to bounce off the Gulf of Mexico. Darrell asked him, "What time is it?"

"Ten after," said Willie, looking at his watch.

"Ten after what? What does the little hand say?"

"Don't have no little hand," said Willie.

That's the way it is with guitar pickers.

Willie is not your usual run of the mill picker. He is the cult hero of what could be called underground country rock that has now surfaced as a madly popular craze even in urban centers.

Willie gets $15,000 a night in Nashville and Las Vegas. So does Charlie Pride, the black country singer from Mississippi who used to pick four straight hours a night for $50, without going to the lavatory, to support his old habit of playing minor league baseball. Charlie is a fabulously successful performer in almost every entertainment medium.

Floyd Tillman's songs — sample: "I love you so much it hurts me" — have sold 48 million records. And Pee Wee King wrote, among others, "The Tennessee Waltz."

No money was changing hands, however, this night at the Soap Creek Saloon because they were all entertaining the CMA (Country Music Association) big shots from Nashville here in convention.

Willie Nelson, an unbridled spirit, was the featured item who pulled them all together. He and Waylon Jennings once paused during a poker game in Dallas to finish writing, "A Good Hearted Woman," one of their big hits.

The Soap Creek Saloon is one of half a hundred honky tonks featuring live country music that have sprung up around the state capital of Texas, which is becoming a mini-Nashville in impact on the business (Nelson and Tillman live in Austin now, as does Jerry Jeff Walker, of "Mr. Bojangles" fame.)

The godfather, although he can't pick a lick himself, is Royal, famous in his own right as the head football coach and director of athletics at the University of Texas.

Those gathered in the Soap Creek Saloon were his people, including such literati as Bud Shrake and Gary Cartwright, a pair of irreverent Texas authors.

It's one of those places where, when you enter, they stamp the back of your hand with fluorescent dye that takes a couple of days to wash off. Anyone not wearing blue jeans is automatically from "out of town." It's dark inside (and outside, too), and the ceilings are so low they need warning signs for basketball players.

The chick drink is beer — Lone Star — and the smoke hangs hazily under the ceiling in a cloud layer, much of it sweet smelling. The crowd is amazingly placid and polite in cramped quarters — they say, "Excuse me, sir," when you step on their feet — in contrast to the amplified blare of the string music, dominated by the steel guitars.

When Pee Wee King was coaxed up to his "shittick," he told about being stopped en route by a Texas highway patrolman, who after writing out his "greetings" gave him the two-fingered peace sign.

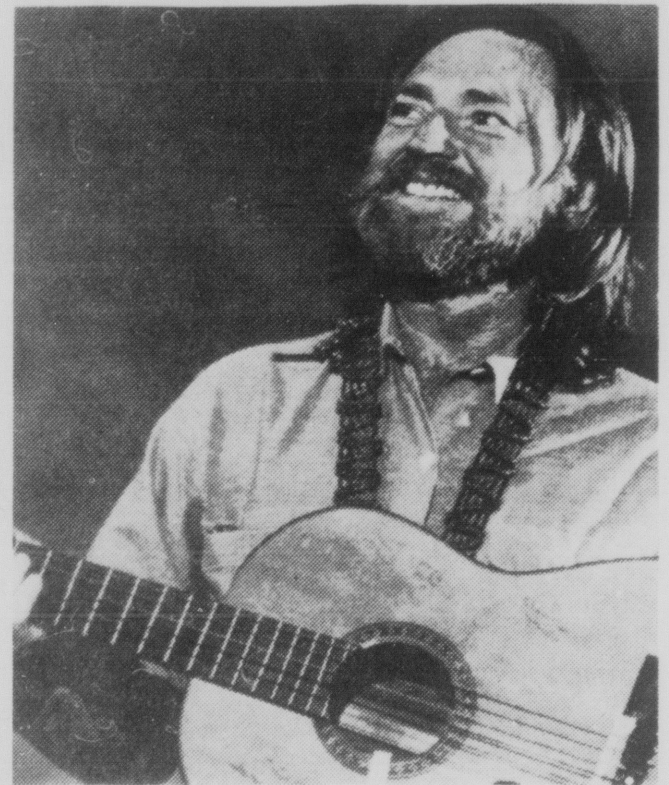

"And," said Pee Wee, holding up his middle finger, "I gave him half the peace sign back."

The early musical sets featured a local talent named Milton Carroll who'll be big nationally some day. Willie Nelson was supposed to go on at 9 o'clock. Willie didn't show up till 11:40, which somehow was expected. He showed up late for a street show to benefit the Austin Symphony Orchestra and still raised $60,000. Comforted by the Lone Star and the sweet smell, the natives weren't really restless.

Wearing a scruffy T-shirt and a red bandana with the knot tied over his forehead, his beard full and scraggly, Willie and his guitar appeared spontaneously in front of his group and commenced playing. No introduction necessary.

Charlie Pride, duded up in a black flat-topped sombrero and stringed pants, was the only black in the place, and Willie, waving a beer bottle, got him up to the band platform, announcing, "Here comes Super Nigger." But there was no racial derogation the way he said it and Charlie didn't seem to mind. The empathy flowed between them as Charlie sang and Willie picked, and occasionally Willie joined in with words, too.

Willie played non-stop until 2 o'clock in the morning. As abruptly as he had come on, he stopped pickin' and put away his guitar. The lights went on. The Soap Creek Saloon was closed for the night.

Willie Nelson ... no introduction needed

Graduation near for area schools

That long-awaited moment for seniors at the two local high schools and State Fair Community College — graduation — is almost here, with commencement exercises scheduled for the next few days.

Leading off will be the SFCC commencement exercises at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Agriculture Building on the State Fairgrounds. More than 300 graduates will hear remarks by guest speaker Dr. Harold D. McAninch, president of Joliet, Ill., Junior College, the oldest such institution in the United States. Dr. McAninch formerly taught in the Smith-Cotton High School speech and drama department.

More than 200 of the graduates will receive either associate of arts or associate of science degrees. The remainder will receive certificates for completing one-year courses in practical nursing, respiratory therapy, secretarial science, welding, bookkeeping, business merchandising and automotive mechanics.

At Sacred Heart High School, the Rev. Mark Miller, assistant pastor at Sacred Heart Church, will deliver the commencement address to 37 graduates at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the school gymnasium. A special baccalaureate mass will be recited at 5 p.m. Sunday by Fr. Miller, the Rev. Vincent Hoying and the Rev. William Savage.

U. S. Congressman Jerry Litton (D-Chillicothe) will address more than 300 graduates at Smith-Cotton High School in ceremonies at 8 p.m. May 28 at Jennie Jaynes Stadium. In case of inclement weather, the exercises will be held in the Smith-Cotton gymnasium.

Blue Cross plea entered

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Another former office employee has admitted guilt in connection with a series of thefts amounting to an estimated $125,000 from Blue Shield-Blue Cross over an 18-month period of 1974-75.

Carolyn Johnson, 26, pleaded guilty Thursday to three charges of stealing more than $50 from the Kansas City area health care organization, the 13th defendant to do so.

Miss Johnson told the Jackson County Circuit Court that on many occasions she arranged for friends and acquaintances to fill out fraudulent medical claims which she processed.

After the claimants received the checks, she would collect half the money. Miss Johnson said she realized more than $15,000 from the scheme.

William D. Welch, assistant Jackson County prosecutor, recommended that she be sentenced to three years imprisonment. Judge Harry A. Hall ordered a presentence investigation.

Mass inoculation program

Vaccine immunity asked

By JOHN STOWELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four private manufacturers of swine-flu vaccine are pressing the federal government for limited immunity from legal liability for the mass inoculation program.

The companies and the government report progress in negotiations.

Bernard Feiner, assistant general counsel in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, said work is "pretty much completed" on government contracts for purchasing privately produced vaccine.

A spokesman for Warner-Lambert, the parent company of Parke, Davis & Co., which is one of the four vaccine manufacturers, said the matter should be settled within a few weeks.

Feiner said HEW is prepared to accept responsibility for providing an explanation of the benefits and risks of the vaccine to patients who receive shots.

"We feel we are now assuming by contract an obligation normally borne by the manufacturers," he said, "because they're in no position to do so because they're not distributing the vaccine."

Firms licensed to produce vaccines are Parke, Davis & Co., Merrell-National Laboratories, Wyeth Laboratories and Merck Sharp & Dohme.

Last month, C. Joseph Stetler, president of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, told newsmen the Ford administration's $135 million campaign to immunize most Americans against the swine flu this fall might be jeopardized if the companies weren't given limited immunity from liability and antitrust enforcement.

The Justice Department has told Dr. Theodore Cooper, HEW assistant secretary for health, that it would not bring antitrust complaints against the four companies for exchanging technical information on vaccine production since such communications were believed to be in the public interest, a spokesman for Cooper said.

The Warner-Lambert spokesman said the companies were not seeking indemnification or a government promise to pay for any judgments brought by persons claiming to have been injured by the vaccine.

"Clearly, the issue is not the vaccine itself. The manufacturers stand behind the vaccine they make and put their name on," he said. "But in a broad-scale immunization program, the normal physician-patient relationship doesn't exist."

Stetler's warning on April 12 had been prompted by language in a Senate committee report explicitly directing that "the various governmental units shall be free from liability in terms of the vaccine. The drug producers should remain responsible for the vaccine, its quality, and any adverse reactions directly attributable to the vaccine." The language was not included in any bill.

Statler said the vaccine is produced under a government licensing and certification arrangement and that manufacturers should be liable only for problems over which they reasonably would have control.

Dr. Delano Meriwether, coordinator of the vaccination program at HEW, said the government's goal is to vaccinate 215 million Americans before the end of this year against the strain of flu believed to be similar to the strain that killed 20 million persons, including 548,000 in the United States, in the 1918-1919 worldwide epidemic.

Final music recital scheduled

The 1975-76 season of recitals and concerts of the Fine Arts department of State Fair Community College will close Sunday afternoon with a program for violin and piano.

The program, featuring Miss Barbara Schrader, 715 West Third, and Miss Marie Butler, Bridgeton, will be held at 3 p.m. in the Student Union. The public is invited to attend.

Miss Schrader received a B. A. degree in music from Stephens College, Columbia, in 1975, where she studied with Melvin Ritter. She has continued her studies with Ritter this year while working as a graduate assistant at Central Missouri State University, studying with Dr. Hugh Williams. Miss Schrader began her study of violin in Sedalia with Mrs. Florence Goodrich and Harold Johnston.

Miss Butler, pianist, graduated in 1976 from the University of Missouri-Columbia, where she has been a piano student of Jane Allen for the last four years.

Both Miss Schrader and Miss Butler studied and performed at the American Academy of Arts in Europe during the summer of 1975.

Sheriff Owen still $12,000 over budget

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Greene County Sheriff Mickey Owen said Thursday he is now $12,000 over budget for this fiscal year but still making progress.

He began the year $46,000 over budget, Owen said.

Three Greene County communities are helping relieve the financial burden. Fair Grove, Strafford and Walnut Grove are paying 50 per cent of the salaries for their town marshalls, the equivalent of a deputy sheriff.

Sakharov joins in supporting group

MOSCOW (AP) — Physicist Andrei Sakharov, winner of the Nobel peace prize, has joined the chairman of the Moscow branch of Amnesty International in support of a group formed here last week to report on alleged violations of civil rights in the Soviet Union.

Sakharov and Valentin Turchin told reporters by telephone Wednesday they support the group's leader, physicist Yuri Orlov, who has been warned by security police that his actions are illegal.

The first was written by Harvard students, assisted by members of the staff of Harvard's Office of Career Services and Off-Campus Learning. Text of the French book is by Laurence C. Wylie, professor of French civilization, and photographs are by Rick Stafford, university photographer.

The anthology will contain work by Harvard undergraduates and by college graduates living in the Boston-Cambridge area.

"Our business people are looking around for small presses" to print the books, Whitman said.

Staffers also are looking into distributing firms, although some distribution will be done by the Harvard University Press, which also provided some of the original financing.

"Ultimately, we'd like to set up a college network" to distribute the books, Whitman said. That project would in-

Harvard students form own publishing house

By JOHN J. MULLINS
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Students at Harvard College, seeking a better chance for a job after graduation, have formed their own publishing house.

"Being a young writer and trying to get into publishing can be frustrating," said John Whitman, a senior from Bethesda, Md., and editorial chairman of The Undergraduate Press. "There is no real set-out route to get into the field of publishing."

Whitman and three other undergraduates were chosen for the executive board in a competition last spring. Another competition now under way is aimed at getting 20 new members.

The Undergraduate Press is chartered as a regular campus organization. Students receive no course credit for their work.

The Press hopes to publish its first three books next fall.

Polly's pointers

Try alcohol solution on candle wax stain

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — I voted at the primary election today for the first time and my Pet Peeve is that there were no erasers on the pencils in the voting booths. — PEARL

DEAR POLLY — The electric mixer takes the lumps out of canned soup easier and leaves it creamier than just stirring with a spoon. After serving the soup, I fill the pan with water and run the mixer in it to clean it. This turbulence not only cleans the beaters effortlessly but gets a good start on cleaning the pot.

My mother does not like the dog in the kitchen when she is cooking, but closing the door shuts off the air flow and is a nuisance. My dad cut a six inch high piece of plywood exactly the width of the door frame. It leans against the inside of the frame. It is sprayed a fluorescent orange to minimize the danger of anyone tripping over it. This was used as a physical barrier when the dog was a puppy. Now he is full grown up with it. He respects it no matter what door the board is set against. We point it out to guests but no one has tripped over it because of the color. — BARBARA

DEAR READERS — As a rule we do not publish unsigned letters but the following one seemed so important as a reminder to all of us. The lack of signature is understandable as I am sure we can all imagine how this mother feels. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I feel this letter must be written to prevent other mothers from making the same mistake that I did. I left my seven year old and twenty month old baby in the car for the few minutes it took me to run into the grocery for some milk.

My rationalization was that the baby was locked in his seat, the children are both well behaved and the seven year old is good at caring for and entertaining the baby and toys were in the car. The car was locked and I had given instructions for the five minutes I expected to be gone. I could get the job done in far less time if I ran in alone and I had parked the car where I could see them the ENTIRE time. Believe me, I found none of these reasons were well founded and that it is worth all the inconvenience of taking the children into the store with me.

Less than two minutes after leaving the car I watched with horror as the car began to roll backwards down a small incline in the parking lot toward the busy street beyond. I will always be so thankful to the lady who held on as she pleaded with my small daughter to unlock the door, so she could put the gear shift into park. Soon I was out there helping with all my might.

The baby had gotten out of his car seat for the first time, crawled into the front and moved the gear shift to reverse in less than two minutes. The seven year old did not have the strength to prevent it.

Since that day I have thought of the many things that could have happened while I was in the store. Previously, when I read of tragedies involving children left in cars I have thought them the result of gross negligence, that they must have been alone a long time or someone just did not care. My experience has taught me that two minutes is too long and I DO care. Thank you. — UNSIGNED

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — While burning a candle on my mantle, it melted and ran down on the sandstone fireplace front. I have tried to remove this with turpentine, a hot iron with a paper towel and dish detergent but to no avail. Do you have any suggestions? — GAIL

DEAR POLLY — I presume that after the above treatments there would be no excess wax remaining, but should there be removed it by scraping with a DULL knife. Heat treatments are mainly for white candles, as the heat may set the dye in colored wax. Try using one cup alcohol to two cups of water.

It is always best to carefully check, before lighting a candle, to see if there is something to catch the dripping wax. Large decorative candles may have to be placed in a saucer or other such container. Small round glass collars can be bought to go on regular size candle holders to catch the drips. — POLLY

Collapsed lung caused by leak

DEAR DR. LAMB — Last year X rays showed I had a collapsed lung. I recovered from this and about a month later the same thing happened to my other lung.

The doctor explained to me that an operation would correct this but said he did not favor an operation for me now because the accumulation of air in my chest wasn't much and I could outgrow this whole problem. I am a 24-year-old, 6 foot, 135 pound male.

What's bothering me the most, Dr. Lamb, is that I am scared to death. Anyone who has had a collapsed lung can tell you that their lungs and chest hurt for a long time afterwards. It wasn't until about three months ago that my lungs felt all right again. Now I am right back again where I started from.

What do you suggest I do? What will happen if both my lungs collapse together? Exactly what kind of operation is the doctor talking about? Is it successful? What are the risks, should I seek other medical opinions? What causes this problem?

DEAR READER — You have had recurrent pneumothorax which means air inside the chest cavity. As disagreeable as this condition is, it is seldom life threatening. It is literally caused by a leak in your lungs. The leak usually occurs because a small blisterlike formation or bleb on the surface of the lung breaks. This is like having a weak spot on an inner tube in a tire and having it finally rupture and the tire collapse.

The lungs are merely a collection of tiny air sacs which are like a cluster of balloons. The only difference is they are all interconnected. When one of these little air sacs converts into a bleb or blister and ruptures, air leaks out of the entire lung. The air then accumulates between the lungs and the chest wall, giving you air in this space which is normally completely filled with the lung tissue. As the air accumulates between the chest wall and the lung, it forces the lung to collapse. The little broken blister on the surface of the lung then heals, sealing the leak and then the air between the lung and the chest wall is absorbed as the lung expands. Usually only a part of the lung actually collapses. The rest of the lung may continue to function normally.

These little blister formations are commonly at the tip of the lungs. Fortunately, because of scarring these areas often cause no further problems. The best way of judging whether or not future attacks are likely to occur is by careful review of X ray studies.

There are two different kinds of operations that are commonly done. One just cuts away the area of the lung where the blister formations are located. Another prevents excessive collapsing of the lung by literally scarring the surface of the lungs so it becomes attached to the surface of the chest obliterating much of the cavity for air to accumulate in.

You probably wouldn't get into serious trouble if you had a collapse of both lungs at the same time because neither lung would collapse entirely. (NEA)

St. Louis bank ordered to pay $1.2 million

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Manchester Bank of St. Louis has been ordered to pay $1.2 million to 78 property buyers in the former Monaco Lake Resort subdivision near Desoto.

St. Louis Circuit Judge Vernon W. Meyer ordered the payment Thursday in a class action suit filed in 1974. It included $738,000 in punitive damages.

The subdivision was originally owned by North American Developers, Inc., which went into bankruptcy.

The suit said purchasers were told in 1974 they did not own the properties and that the land was sold at a sheriff's auction to meet liens against the original owner.

It contended the bank conspired to collect payment on property it knew the persons no longer owned.

On Sept. 15, 1775, George Washington gave specific instructions to Gen. Benedict Arnold before his expedition to Quebec to "gain and maintain the good will of the Canadians by purchasing all provisions and supplies and prevent any plunder." The next day The World Almanac recalls, Gen. Washington overruled the opinion of his General Staff and approved of the Continental Army's march, under Arnold, into Canada.

Can Democrats' better instincts prevail?

WASHINGTON — Democratic National Chairman Robert S. Strauss has admonished the party's 153-member platform committee to avoid the bickering and battling that have burdened the party for eight years. Strauss might just as well burp into the eye of a hurricane in the hope of scaring it away.

Rowan

There will come a time, after the convention when the candidates are selected, for Democrats to bury what Strauss calls "myopia, bitterness, pettiness" and unite to achieve victory. But it would be a travesty, at this stage, for the various factions of the party not to assert themselves in trying to influence a platform that presumably will tell the nation and world what the Democratic party now stands for.

Here is a party that seeks to embrace men with views as diverse as those of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama. It seeks to offer a foreign policy palatable both to a quiet-spoken, wise old gentleman, W. Averell Harriman, and to a blustering, glib-tongued showoff, Daniel Patrick Moynihan. It is a party that wishes to hold the loyalty of whites who oppose school busing vehemently, but also of blacks who argue fervently that the party must give unwavering support to federal judges who order busing when that is the only tool with which to end generations of racial discrimination in education.

Given these kinds of issues, that platform committee will either fight furiously or reveal that Strauss or someone has stacked the deck in such a way that a handful of members can foist a sham platform upon the public.

The country deserves to know the answer to a question raised by AFL-CIO president George Meany: will the Democratic party, in this bicentennial year, bend its sails to accommodate those politicians who have spent the year attacking "big government and social programs"?

Meany says this new breed of Democratic contenders "would retreat from the 20th century to that so-called 'simpler' time when the social ills of poverty, deprivation and discrimination were left to right themselves — the 'good old days' of sweatshops, segregation, starvation."

Jimmy Carter, the frontrunner for the Democratic nomination, has pledged over and over to give this country a "government as good as its people." The implication is that Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew, Gerald Ford and Nelson Rockefeller, are a cut below the normal citizen in morality and wisdom, men who achieved power through some aberration.

It has proved to be good politics for Carter to tell the people that they are better than the men they elected to power, but that is not altogether true.

Nixon and Agnew were elected because they knew how BAD the people could be. They knew just how much they could flummox the public by appealing to racial prejudices, class hatreds, greed and paranoia — by basing their campaign on slogans like "law 'n order," opposition to "forced busing," contempt for "welfare bums," the decrying of "reverse discrimination."

A bad man, Nixon, became president because voters with bad passions and bad instincts turned out to be in the majority in 1968. There are some Democrats on that platform committee who believe, or fear, that the winner of the presidency this year will be the candidate who appeals most shrewdly to those same bad passions and instincts.

When Carter promises a government "as good as the people," perhaps he means that he is going to appeal to, and draw forth, the more decent, compassionate, loving side of the great mass of Americans. That good side of the people is there, waiting for a leader with the faith and the guts to cater to it.

The Democratic platform will give us our first clues as to which way the majority of the party wants to go — toward an appeal to the worst, or the very best, in American voters.

If it takes a brutal scrap for the committee to resolve that issue, let the fighting rage on.

Floating down the Current

By DOUG KNEIBERT

There's no such thing as a bad float trip. Some are just better than others.

It depends a lot on the weather. I decided last week, when it rained two out of three days while we were on the Current River.

We put in about noon Saturday at Alley Springs on the Jack's Fork, which is a smaller but more appealing river than the Current. For the first half-day or so there was the usual complement of amateur canoeists splashing and capsizing their way down the river.

Things began to thin out 2 or 3 miles past Eminence, however, and this portion of the Ozark National Scenic Riverways began to assume a more pristine appearance.

We bought provisions at the grocery in Eminence and listened to the proprietor complain about how all the city slickers have ruined the fishing as he rang up $74 worth of groceries. After a stop for ice, he hauled us back down under the bridge where we loaded the food on the 17-foot canoes.

I've floated the Current many times, but have noticed with distress of late how fame has brought higher prices. Three canoes cost us $112 for three days, which would make it worth your while to buy one if you were a regular floater.

Sunny, warm weather was ours for about an hour or so out of Eminence, after which the sky became overcast. By camp that night it was starting to spit rain on and off.

We cooked steaks over the grill, boiled corn on the cob and mixed up a salad for dinner. From that point on it was down hill, victual-wise. I spent much of the night marveling at just how loud a 16-year-old boy can snore and wondering if somewhere in the world there was an air mattress that didn't leak. Perhaps in a museum.

The next day, and the one after that, my most valuable pieces of equipment were a poncho and pith helmet, plus a sponge to bail out the canoe. But despite these minor inconveniences, the river had its charms to offer.

Turtles of various types basked on logs in what there was of the sun. A couple of snakes braved the elements, and assorted bird life — including what I assumed to be a flock of bright yellow wild canaries — did their stuff.

In the afternoon we stopped at Blue Springs to admire this lovely spot, designated a natural area by the State Department of Conservation. We filled our water jugs from the fountain that flowed from its sapphire depths.

The weather worsened on Monday, so we pressed on for Van Buren, which we had originally planned to reach a day later. As we left the national riverway a few miles from the town, signs of civilization began to appear in the form of cabins. Hammering could be heard on the wooded slopes as more were being built. It made you a believer in preservation.

We made Van Buren by late afternoon, and unloaded below the bridge. After we had completed the task, Mother Nature bid us a special farewell by bathing the scene in warm sunlight and dispelling every cloud from the sky.

Local hospital feels rising costs pinch

The steadily-rising costs of health care were reflected on the local level the other day, when the Board of Trustees of Bothwell Hospital approved new room rate increases.

The daily rate hikes on both semi-private and private rooms average 12.7 per cent. The $8-a-day increases pushed the cost of a semi-private room to $63 a day, while a private room will cost $66 a day.

As the board made clear, the rate boosts reflect the usual story: an attempt to stay ahead of costs. Bothwell Hospital's expenses per hospital day increased 11.8 per cent this fiscal year over the previous one, hospital officials report.

The new rates, which become effective June 1, mean that room costs at Bothwell Hospital have come close to doubling in the last five years.

So much for the bad news. The good news is that costs at Bothwell Hospital are still relatively low compared to other facilities. This is the case in this part of the state, as the board noted the other night, and is also true compared to national averages. Among 11 hospitals of comparable size in the state, the average cost per hospital stay in March was $804.57, compared to $674.27 for Bothwell. The national average for hospitals in this size category was $878.74 in March, according to figures provided locally.

All of this, of course, may be of small comfort to those who find themselves financially strapped by rising health costs. Although inflation as a whole has moderated in the last year or so, costs in this area keep climbing at an alarming rate. The overall rise in health care costs across the nation was something like 17 per cent last year.

Many people view national health insurance as the solution to this problem. There is evidence, however, that such systems bring on a whole new set of problems, such as Great Britain is currently experiencing. But we can expect the pressure for such supposed panaceas to continue unless the health care industry finds some way to bring costs under control.

WASHINGTON — There is a poignant story behind the oil boom in Alaska. It's the story of the proud Eskimo people who, for centuries, had been left alone in their frigid, forbidding homeland. Now their way of life, harsh though it was, has been cruelly disrupted.

We sent our roving reporter, Hal Bernton, into Eskimo country to get the story. He spent a week with the Eskimos, hunting with them on the Arctic ice pack and relaxing with them afterward in their shanties.

The discovery of oil in Prudhoe Bay has brought prosperity to the Eskimos. But it has also brought great anguish.

With the millions in taxes they have collected from the oil companies, the Eskimos have built a fancy hotel for the white businessmen and bureaucrats who get as far north as Barrow.

"It's a honky hotel," grouched a young Eskimo woman. "Our people need a place for the old folks to stay, an alcoholic treatment center, a recreation center for the young."

The Eskimos themselves live in clapboard shacks alongside the multimillion-dollar hotel. They used to dwell in sod huts, which were extremely cramped but easy to keep warm. Their new clapboard houses, built of giant wooden packing crates and junked lumber, are more spacious, more cluttered and considerably more drafty.

Bernton was invited into the two-room home of a family of six. The living room, kitchen and bathroom were crammed into one minuscule room; the other room was jammed full of beds.

As evidence of the Eskimos' new prosperity, their yards are littered with broken-down automobiles, abandoned snowmobiles, empty Coke cans and other debris of the encroaching modern civilization. This is mingled with the debris of the old civilization — caribou hooves, walrus heads, dead seals on parked sleds and caribou skins flapping in the Arctic wind.

Merry-go-round

Oil boom causes Eskimos anguish

The oil millions have also gone to build a luxurious office building, with flush toilets and running water, for the town officials. But the townspeople still haul their water in the form of huge ice chunks from a frozen fresh-water lagoon.

The water from these ice blocks, which should be but usually isn't boiled before it is used, is jealously rationed in each household. For toilets, most Eskimos use "honey buckets" which are dumped outside. The raw sewage remains frozen in the winter. But in the summer, the snow and sewage melt, giving off an awful stench. This creates a serious health problem for the children who play near the thawing sewage.

Just a few miles from the center of town, the Navy has established an Arctic Research Laboratory. For the 300 people stationed here, the Navy pipes in water through a filtering plant from its own private lagoon. There are saunas, a recreation hall and a movie theater for their relaxation.

The base is off limits to the Eskimos who inhabit this frozen wilderness. Only on rare occasions, such as the showing of the movie "Jaws," are the townspeople invited inside the base.

For years, the Eskimos in Barrow had heated their homes with whale and seal oil. The Navy tapped a natural gas field, however, to heat the base. The Eskimos were eager to share in this valuable find. It took them 14 years of delicate negotiations before the Navy finally agreed to sell some of the gas to the people of Barrow.

But the curse of Barrow is alcohol, which white men have introduced to the Eskimos. Unhappily, most Eskimos are unable to cope with the booze, which has had a devastating effect upon their culture.

In their sober moments, they have voted to ban the sale of liquor from Barrow. But several flourishing bootleg operations continue to peddle all they will buy.

Our reporter encountered a young

Eskimo, with a thick shock of black hair, who was a harpooner on a whale boat. No one was more skilled, more daring in pursuit of the great humpbacked whale.

He promised to teach Barton about whaling. "But if I am going to teach you," said the proud hunter, "then you must know all about me. You must know that I drink, because I do."

He drank so much one night that he was close to collapse. Ashamed to go home to his wife, the hunter asked Bernton to find a place for him to sleep. Bernton got a room in the luxurious hotel and assisted the drunken harpooner inside.

There came a knock at the door. The night manager insisted that the Eskimo couldn't stay. Sadly, resignedly, the great hunter staggered from the room and trudged down the hall into the freezing night. There was no place for him in the hotel his people had built.

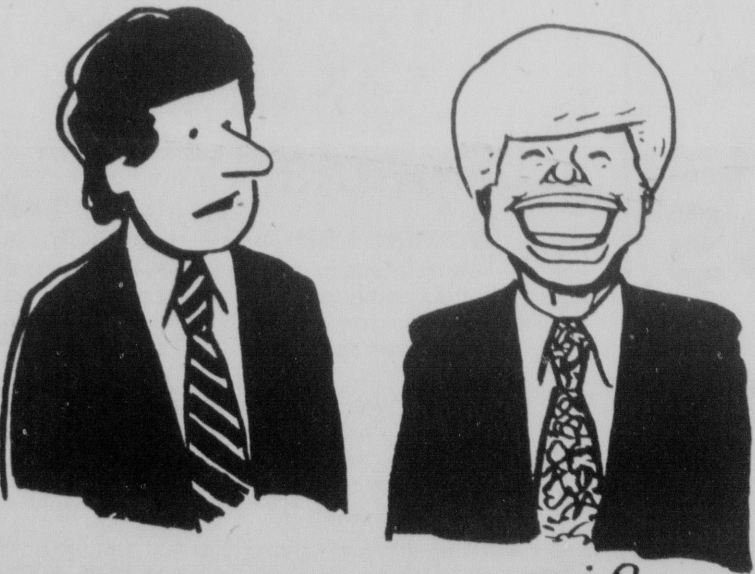

Drunken Eskimos routinely are routed out of the hotel. Yet the town has no treatment center, not even a town jail, where they can sleep it off. So they wind up often in the cold street. Last year, three people froze to death in the streets. One was a 14-year-old girl who had failed to make it home from a drinking party. Medics report that children as young as 10 years old have been treated for alcoholism.

The next favorite beverage is Coca Cola. Many youngsters, thanks to their new affluence, can afford as many as 12 cans a day. The cokes and candies, introduced by the white man, have taken a terrible toll of the Eskimo children's teeth. The only dentist in town is kept constantly busy installing dentures in the mouths of elementary school children.

The Eskimos still hunt the caribou in the winter, the humpbacked whale in the spring, the walrus and seal in the summer. But it is no longer the same since the white man came to drill for oil.

don't put it off. Time is of the essence.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me what are the duties of a clergyman's wife? I am expected to serve on every committee in town and I am sick of it. Last night I was given a list of 60 people to telephone. I get ill thinking about the time I'll be spending on a project that doesn't interest me.

My home responsibilities are heavy (four children, big house, sick mother) and I have no time to do the things that are essential. I feel I am being used because of my husband's position. I need some solid advice before I have a nervous breakdown. — Irate In Illinois

Dear I: Stand up for your rights, dear. But first, talk this one over with your clergyman.

Dear Ann Landers: This morning I received in the mail a very fancy engraved announcement of the adoption of a baby girl. I was stunned. The adoption of a child is a highly personal thing. Isn't it poor taste for parents to send out announcements? I'd like your opinion. — Flabbergasted
In Medicine Hat, Canada

Dear Hat: I see nothing wrong with sending announcements to close friends and relatives when a baby is added to the family. The fact that the child is adopted should make no difference whatever.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Royals push lead to 1 1/2 in West

KANSAS CITY (AP)—The Kansas City Royals spat three years accumulation of dust out of their mouths Thursday night and tasted a giddy confidence. "We just don't think we're going to lose," gushed Hal McRae. "That's the thing with us. We've got it rolling like they used to have it rolling."

Spanking the Oakland A's, 8-4, the happy Royals fattened their lead in the American League West to 1 1/2 games and concluded the most successful home stand in the eight-year history of the franchise, winning nine of 11. The last two victories came against Oakland, which has dominated the Royals and everyone else in the western division since 1971.

"We're through eating their dust," laughed one exuberant Royal. "They're just not the same team they used to be."

When Oakland announced its blockbuster trade this year, sending star pitcher Ken Holtzman and superstar slugger Reggie Jackson to Baltimore, the Royals viewed the development like a hungry tiger views an unexpected limp in the gait of a distant antelope.

"I don't think they're the same aggressive team they used to be," said shortstop Fred Patek. "They're still good, sure. But not like they used to be."

"You can't lose personnel like Holtzman and Jackson and maintain the same quality," said McRae. "It would be like the Buffalo Bills losing O.J. Simpson. They'd still be good, but..."

"It's hard to compare the two clubs with the past three years because we're so much better than we used to be," said pitcher Steve Busby, who watched the series from the sidelines with a sore shoulder. "But there's a spark that Reggie provided that isn't there anymore. They're still good, but it's just not the same A's."

"They're not nearly as good as they used to be," said John Mayberry. "They don't rip and snort the way they used to."

The A's took a 4-2 lead in the seventh inning on an RBI-double by Phil Garner and the second solo home run of the game by Don Baylor, who was one of three former Baltimore players involved in the trade.

The next time up the Royals batted around, scoring five runs and putting the game on ice.

"We beat them just like they used to beat us," said Busby. "Not that Baylor isn't doing a good job. Obviously, he is. And he is a very talented player. But Reggie and Holtzman added something to that club that's missing now."

The red-hot Royals take their show on the road now for a 14-game trip beginning in Minnesota tonight. The trip will end with a three-game set in Oakland, which has been a house of horrors for the Royals always in the past.

The loss dropped the A's to seven games out of first place, the furthest Charlie Finley's boys have been removed from the division lead since September 1970.

"Don't ask me who I think is the team to beat," scolded Mayberry. "We're the team to beat."

David Goldberg ... arm's A-OK

Arm nearly severed

11-year-old back from bad injury

SAN DIEGO (AP) — This week, David Goldberg pitched his first Little League game in almost a year, striking out seven batters in three innings.

Not bad for an 11-year-old kid whose arm nearly was severed in a motorcycle accident last June.

"The child is unreal," said his mother, Carol, who fought off tears as she watched her son throw pitch after pitch as if nothing had ever happened to him.

"I was riding on the back of my brother's motorcycle when we hit a bump and the shock absorber broke," David recalled. "We slowed down and all of a sudden, it happened."

A baseball jersey he had been carrying caught in the motorcycle chain, pulling him off the bike and sending his arm through the spinning steel spokes of the rear wheel. Within seconds, the spokes had cut through bone and nerves, leaving only a small piece of skin holding his left arm to his body.

Dr. Tony Woodall, at the field for an awards ceremony that day, splinted the severed arm and wrapped it in a plastic bag as the youth was rushed to Scripps Memorial Hospital.

"They were going to amputate the arm," said David. "Then the doctors saw some movement in my little finger. If the finger hadn't moved, they would have taken the arm off."

But the arm was reimplanted in a 4 1/2-hour operation and no infection developed. Then began David's fight for a trip to the mound again.

"I had no flexation in the wrist and could only move two fingers," he said.

Through February and March, he tried and failed. "Then one night, I had a dream that I could catch the ball by closing the glove with the other hand. I tried it and it worked."

He signed up for a minor Little League team and kept practicing with his brother, Jeff, who had been driving the motorcycle when the accident occurred.

But when he was placed on a team, he began having second thoughts. "He kept saying that he couldn't play," said Jeff. "But I kept bugging him to go out and play. Heck, he would have been in the majors if he had signed up earlier."

David is playing again — pitching, batting and fielding. He also plays tennis and tackle football with his sewn-on arm.

His only problem, he says, is constantly having to explain to other youngsters how he got those strange-looking scars on his arm.

"I tell them I got bitten by a shark," he says.

S-C Tigers join new soccer league

The Sedalia District 200 School Board has approved Sedalia Smith-Cotton's move into a new soccer league, which will be made up of seven clubs in the Kansas City area.

Smith-Cotton also will play a fall schedule rather than a winter schedule, which the team played in during recent years.

Included in the league, which will open play this fall, are Maur Hill (Atchison, Kan.), Barstow and Pembroke Country Day of Kansas City, Saviors of the World in Bonner Springs, Kan., Tri-City Baptist of Raytown and Kansas City (Kan.) Christian.

The School Board agreed to move the Tigers' soccer games to Centennial Park rather than Jennie Jaynes Stadium, pending approval by the Sedalia Parks and Recreation Department.

Moving the soccer season to the fall will allow the Tigers to compete in the Missouri State High School Activities Association's state playoff system.

Smith-Cotton had been a member of the Metro Soccer League the past few years, however, many of the schools are dropping their interscholastic soccer programs.

Pem-Day also moves into the new conference from the Metro Soccer League. Saviors of the World was a member of the league a few years ago.

After costly and extensive prior treatment failed, this skin disease was believed incurable. At this point, Happy Jack mange medicine was used with dramatic success. # Double plays pull out Denny, Cardinals, 4-1

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Whoever labeled the double play a pitcher's best friend must have had John Denny in mind.

The young St. Louis right-hander watched his teammates execute three such twin killings Thursday and hurled the Cardinals to a 4-1 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I can't say enough about double plays," Denny acknowledged after stymying the Pirates on 11 hits, including seven in the final four innings.

"When the guys make the plays behind me it makes me try that much harder," he said. "I thought I was in trouble when (Al) Oliver led off and then (Willie) Stargell got another hit in the eighth. That's when I needed the double play the most and got it. If we hadn't turned the play, who knows what would have happened on the next pitch."

Aside from execution afield, Denny, 2-2, was also bolstered by a four-run St. Louis first inning capped by Mike Tyson's two-run single.

But once Pittsburgh broke through for an unearned run and three of its hits in the sixth his fate was largely in the hands of his teammates.

Pinch-hitter Ed Ott singled with one out in the seventh and moved to second on Denny's lone walk to Frank Taveras.

Tyson, however, bailed the pitcher out of a jam by converting Richie Hebner's grounder into two outs from second base and an inning later Don Kessinger did the same thing on Bill Robinson's shot to short.

The 6-foot-3 Denny had earlier helped himself by starting a twin killing on Stargell's grounder to the mound in the fourth inning.

"Our defense has just been superb, particularly that of Kessinger," Denny declared. "Sure, they made an error that cost us a run, but the plays they made saved us a lot more."

St. Louis' victory, its fourth in 13 games at conclusion of a hapless home stand, came on the heels of a nine-game performance by Cards pitchers that cost the club a 7-6 loss to the Pirates Wednesday night.

"We've played this team six times now and one of the things they've shown is the fact that if you don't throw strikes they aren't going to swing," Denny noted.

"I think another aspect today was that when their home run hitters came up I was very conscious of it. If you give them a break, they're going to nail you to the wall."

By virtue of the win, the Cards remained 9 1/2 games behind the National League East's division-leading Philadelphia Phillies but still within hailing distance in the estimation of Pittsburgh Manager Danny Murtaugh.

"I think they'll resurface," Murtaugh said of what lies ahead for the Cards. "Their bullpen will bounce back. It's just in a slump right now, and they're a good-hitting club."

Yankees, Red Sox spice up action in New York

Bench-clearing fight takes some glitter off Yaz' night

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Carl Yastrzemski had his hands up, but he did his hitting with a bat and left the punching to others.

After a bench-clearing sixth-inning brawl that featured Boston's Carlton Fisk and Bill Lee against New York's Lou Piniella and Craig Nettles, Yastrzemski went to work. He slammed a tie-breaking two-run homer in the eighth inning and another two-run shot in the ninth as the Red Sox walked to an 8-2 victory over the Yankees Thursday night.

Coupled with the three home runs Yaz walloped against Detroit one night earlier, it gave him a major league record-five in two games. It was the first such feat in the American League since New York's Tony Lazzeri did it 40 years ago.

According to Yastrzemski, it also woke the Red Sox up.

"Until the fight, Ed Figueroa was moving us down and we were very complacent," he said. "But there was a tremendous will to win from the seventh inning on. It was the first time since the World Series I've seen the pulling-together attitude that we had last year."

Rick Burleson started Boston's late inning barrage with a two-run homer in the seventh inning. Yastrzemski connected in the eighth and then capped a four-run burst in the ninth with his record-matching blow.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Kansas City Royals whipped the Oakland A's 8-4, the California Angels downed the Texas Rangers 6-3 and the Chicago White Sox edged the Minnesota Twins 3-2. Baltimore, Cleveland, Detroit and Milwaukee were not scheduled.

Baserunner Piniella and catcher Fisk battled to a draw after a collision at the plate, although Piniella suffered an injury to his right ring finger and went for X rays. Nettles, however, emerged with a clean decision over Lee and the Red Sox left-hander suffered a serious injury to his pitching shoulder that will sideline him indefinitely.

Angels 6, Rangers 3
Andy Etchebarren's two-run double capped a three-run eighth inning that propelled California over Texas. The Rangers had rallied from an early 3-0 deficit to tie the game but Rusty Torres walked and Bobby Bonds singled for the third time to open the eighth before Bruce Bochte singled home Torres.

White Sox 3, Twins 2
Rich Coggins, Chet Lemon and Jack Brohamer each drove in a run and Rich Gossage scattered seven hits to lead the White Sox over the Twins. Lemon, who also scored a run and stole two bases, put the White Sox ahead to stay when he broke a 1-1 tie in the second inning by singling with two outs after Brian Downing doubled.

TNB into semifinals

KANSAS CITY — A pair of goals by Martin White and key goal tending by Henry Klover pulled the Sedalia Third National Bank Junior Kickers into the upper-division semifinals of the Heart of America Soccer League's post-season tourney here Thursday evening.

The 2-1 victory over Gladstone Bank earns the Junior Kickers a berth in Sunday afternoon's semifinals against K&A United, which upended Mountain Valley Water, 2-1.

White, on an assist from Kent Burholder, gave the Junior Kickers a 1-0 half time lead.

White scored again in the second half on an assist from Mike Marcum.

Brad Davis scored the goal for Gladstone Bank.

Paul Weigell had 17 saves for Gladstone Bank; Klover was credited with seven.

K&A and Mountain Valley were deadlocked at 1-1 after regulation play. The teams squared off in two overtime periods without a score. K&A won the game on penalty kicks.

The Junior Kickers and K&A United will meet in semifinal action at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Siena ousted from tourney

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Five teams remained alive with only Siena sidelined today as the NCAA Division II northeast Regional baseball tournament entered its second day.

In first round games of the double elimination tournament Thursday, Sacred Heart belted LeMoyne 11-3 with an eight-run 10th inning. New Haven blanked Siena 7-0 and C.W. Post defeated Springfield 6-3. LeMoyne then eliminated Siena 11-1.

The schedule today had New Haven playing Springfield and Sacred Heart meeting C.W. Post.

Region AAU trials Saturday at CMSU

Qualifiers from Tuesday afternoon's Amateur Athletic Union's preliminary trials at Jennie Jaynes Stadium will venture to Central Missouri State University in Warrensburg for the Western Missouri Central Region meet.

The top three finishers in each event at Warrensburg, which will be held at the university's Vernon Kennedy Stadium, will qualify for advancement to the Missouri State Junior Olympics, June 5. That meet will also be held in Warrensburg.

In addition to the bantam, midget and junior division boys and girls who qualified at Tuesday's preliminary meet, the intermediate and senior division boys and girls will open their competition in the AAU trials.

Kings, Scouts run into stumbling block

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Kings of the National Basketball Association failed in an effort Thursday to gain a major lease concession from the city in connection with the attempt to purchase the Kansas City Scouts hockey franchise.

A Kings director and attorney, Robert Margolin, said following a meeting with the city council audit and finance committees that he could not recommend the Kings pursue the purchase further.

Joe Serviss, committee chairman, and Robert Kipp, city manager, said however that they thought the Kings had received the best lease at Kemper Arena they could get and knew it. They said they believed the Kings would continue to try to buy the National Hockey League franchise when they meet with the NHL next week.

Margolin asked the city to include a heretofore unmentioned clause in the proposed 28-year arena lease that would let the franchise be moved if the club's financial losses were $25,000 or more in one year or $75,000 or more in any two of the years immediately preceding the year in which the owners contemplated moving the team.

Under the agreement, the Kings would have agreed to pay the city a penalty of $130,000 if the franchise were moved, but would not have been liable for other damages.

The proposed clause was branded by councilman Richard Berkley as an "easy out" that did not give the city and its taxpayers and arena bond holders the protection they deserve.

Margolin reportedly told the committee that the Kings needed the city to adopt the clause immediately.

Drivers set for last tries

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mario Andretti is expected to challenge Johnny Rutherford's pole position-winning speed of 188.957 miles an hour when the final weekend of qualification for the May 30 Indianapolis 500 begins Saturday morning.

Janet Guthrie, meanwhile, seemed almost in need of a miracle to get her speed up within reasonable striking distance for a spot in the 33-car lineup.

Andretti, with a reputation as an outstanding qualifier, has already topped 188 m.p.h. in practice in his McLaren and has consistently been the fastest of the two dozen or so cars still hoping to fight their way into the lineup in trials Saturday and Sunday.

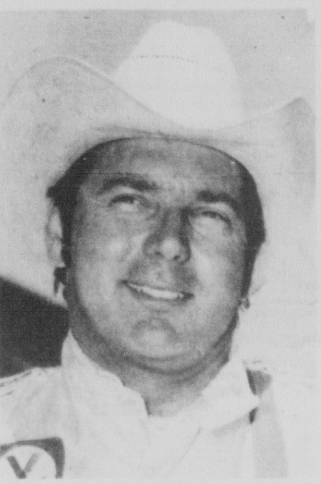

"It's fun to run for the pole and have the fastest car," Andretti said after turning in the quickest practice run Thursday. "But I had a commitment to Formula 1 last weekend, so I'm just going to have to be satisfied with getting in the field and doing well in the race.

"If this was the first weekend of qualifying, I would really hang it out and go for the pole. But now it doesn't mean anything, except maybe to your pride. We'll just have to see what happens. I'll do what is comfortable, without taking unnecessary chances — with myself or the equipment."

Andretti said the extra week of practice, which he might not have gotten if he had qualified the first weekend, has resulted in some discoveries that may help build even more speed. "I feel like I'll be able to race real hard in the race itself," Andretti added. "I'm really looking forward to it."

Andretti set the pace Thursday with a top speed of 185.529 m.p.h., which he said was not a "flat out" lap.

Miss Guthrie managed only 168.004 m.p.h. and had various minor problems, including a tow-in once when she stopped on the course. Teammate Dick Simon hit 173.210 m.p.h. in a test of the car — still well below what observers predict will be needed.

Only 10 spots remain and, so far, Miss Guthrie is not among the 10 fastest cars yet to qualify. The slowest driver already in the field is Jim McElreath at 179.122 m.p.h.

Unqualified cars which have turned in speeds at better than McElreath's speed already in practice include those driven by Andretti, Salt Walther, George Snider, Steve Krisloff, Jerry Grant, Al Loquasto and David Hobbs.

Expected to make his first appearance on the track today was Lloyd Ruby, another driver likely to exceed 180 m.p.h. in qualifying.

Ali-Dunn fight

Agreement is reached

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — The figures are usually millions when Muhammad Ali boxes, but the German promotional firm whose financial unsteadiness almost led to the cancellation of Ali's fight Tuesday with Richard Dunn of England was born only three months ago with a declared capital of $8,000.

It took the same firm — Promot, GMBH — only $150,000 dollars in "up front" cash a month later to convince Herbert Muhammad, Ali's manager, to go ahead with plans for the fight here, an informed source said.

"The money was an unusually small amount for this kind of thing," the source went on, "but Herbert took it. It got him in with people he knew nothing about, but the feeling was that if it's German it's probably solid."

On Thursday, the solidity of the deal had crumbled to the point where Robert Arun, the American co-promoter who sold the Ali-Dunn package to the National Broadcasting Company, said the fight was close to collapse because the Germans had not come up with $225,000 due Ali.

The sources said Ali and Herbert Muhammad had the choice of keeping the $150,000 in cash and foregoing the rest of their $1.65 million purse or waiving a part of the money owed them.

Eventually, a deal was worked out in which the outstanding sum, equivalent to the amount Ali was estimated to have to pay in German taxes, was reduced to $160,000 after consultation with German tax officials. Promot signed a statement that it would pay the money and Ali was left about $65,000 short.

"It would not have hurt me none to go home," Ali said, possibly thinking that the $1.65 million seemed insignificant alongside the $6 million he stands to gain boxing against the Japanese wrestler in Tokyo next month and the $9 million he'll get for fighting Ken Norton in Yankee Stadium in September.

The important thing in Munich, Ali said, was that "I got into $20 million condition here."

Ali's German bedfellows are nearly invisible. Walter Settele, a tax accountant who negotiated for Promot, has said his backers are people who prefer to stay out of the limelight.

Uli Kaiser, a German newspaperman hired to promote the fight, said he was employed by an intermediary who told him on three occasions that it could not say who the fight backers were.

The intermediary, a public relations firm specializing in sports, dropped Promot on Wednesday when it said it received only half its fees.

In any case, the backers were people without money enough or sufficient experience to avoid requiring a heavy advance ticket sale to provide them with the cash they needed to continue daily operations.

10,000-meter run record established

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. (AP) — Loris College's Chuck Korte set a meet record Thursday night to win the 10,000-meter run at the NAIA Track and Field Championship.

Korte's time was 29:46.4, bettering the old record of 30:07.7 set by Dave Antognoli of Edinboro State in 1972.

Tony Brian of Marymount College was second with a time of 29:47.5.

In the only final competition Thursday, Ken Brown of Biola College won the hammer throw competition with a mark of 52.30 meters.

Canadian Fred Sommers of Simon Fraser College was second with a throw of 52.16.

Midway through the decathlon, Bruce Kupersmith of Pacific College held a slight lead. The competition will be completed Friday.

Kupersmith had 3,692 points, 35 ahead of Mark Burt of Pacific University of Forest Grove, Ore., after five events were completed Thursday.

Events scheduled for today were the 110-meter hurdles, discus, pole vault, javelin and the 1,500-meter run.

Races resume Saturday night

HOLTS SUMMIT — Division leaders Gary Scott and Dalton Walker will try and add to their point leads Saturday evening at the regular, weekly racing show at Capital Speedway here.

Scott, a Holts Summit product, has a commanding lead in the sprint car division over Warrensburg's Jay Lyle. Scott has a total of 1,410 points; runner-up Lyle trails in second with 955. Gene Gennetten of Parkville, Mo., is third with 550.

Other sprint drivers in the top 10 included Leonard McCarl, Des Moines, Iowa; Bob Thoman, Higginsville; Tom Corbin, Carrollton; Roy Constock, Versailles; Phil Howe, Jacksonville, Ill.; and Ron Milton, also of Jacksonville, Ill.

Walker, Curryville, Mo., has only a five-point lead over Ed Knaebel of Jefferson City.

657-670 in the stock car standings. Mike Dibben of Kansas City isn't far back in the third spot with 515 points.

Leland Frank, Holts Summit, and Lossen Leonard, Jefferson City, are fourth and fifth in the current point standings.

The balance of the top 10 in the late model stock car division includes Eddie Gray, Jefferson City; Tom Frasher, Jefferson City; Flea Atkin, Holts Summit; Al Robinson, New Bloomfield; and Norm Creason, Columbia.

Hasler and Associates Racing Enterprises, Inc., promoters of the weekly shows at the three-eighths mile dirt oval, will open Saturday's program at 7 p.m. with hot laps. The first qualifying heat is set for 8 p.m. Twenty-five lap features are scheduled in each event.

Last week's program bowed to rain.

Celtics don't scare Suns

PHOENIX (AP) — Phoenix Coach John MacLeod says his Suns aren't scared of big, bad Boston, even though the Celtics have been National Basketball Association champions a dozen times.

"I don't think our players will be awed," MacLeod said. "They have a lot of respect for Boston — we all do — but our guys feel we have a good ball club."

"And they realize the importance of staying with what we've been doing the last month and a half or so."

The Suns scheduled a brief shooting workout today before heading for Boston, where the opening game of their best-of-seven NBA championship series will be played Sunday. Game Two also will be in Boston, next Thursday, before the teams come here for Games Three and Four May 30 and June 2.

The upstart Suns, who stunned defending champion Golden State in their Western Conference playoff series, are counting on their bench to help them against the Celtics, especially forward Keith Erickson, guard Dick Van Arsdale and center Dennis Awtry.

"When Boston goes to its bench, it has to come in with inexperience for the most part," said Phoenix assistant coach Al Bianchi.

"When we go to our bench, we come in with an 11-year veteran in Van Arsdale, an Erickson (11-year veteran), an Awtry (six-year veteran)."

Phoenix was beaten four times in four games with the Celtics during the regular season. Boston won 114-100 and 122-102 at home, and took the Suns 112-106 and 109-108 in Phoenix. MacLeod doesn't expect any new twists from Boston Coach Tom Heinsohn.

Robert McCall goes to Calgary

CALGARY (AP) — The Calgary Stampeders of the Canadian Football League have announced the signing of a former National Football League running back and a veteran Canadian lineman for the 1976 season.

The club announced Thursday the signing of Robert McCall, a 210-pounder, who was drafted by Cincinnati Bengals in the 1973 U.S. college draft and later played with the New England Patriots, who kept him on their taxi squad last season.

Also signed was Jim Bond, beginning his sixth year with the club. A graduate of Simon Fraser University, he has played defensive end and offensive tackle as a pro. He injured a knee in an exhibition game last season and was out for the season but the surgery has been declared successful.

Southeast, Neb. Omaha win openers

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Perfect baseball weather spurred Southeast Missouri State and the University of Nebraska-Omaha to victory Thursday in first round NCAA Division II regional play at the University of Missouri-St. Louis.

Mark Amick doubled home two in the sixth to give Southeast Missouri their decisive tallies in a come-from-behind 8-3 win over Mankato State. A bases-loaded Mankato double in the third inning spoiled David Jorn's five-hitter and scored Mankato's only runs.

Rich Shette and Al Wees, with three hits each, led Nebraska-Omaha to a 12-6 triumph over Missouri-St. Louis. Jim Hercinger smashed a two-run homer for Nebraska-Omaha in the sixth inning.

Today Nebraska-Omaha was scheduled to face Southeast Missouri, while Mankato met Missouri-St. Louis. The loser of the first contest took on the winner of the second in the double elimination affair.

The winner of the meet advances to the Division II World Series at Springfield, Ill., June 5-9.

Fred Marti tops field with seven-under 65

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — "I think it's a lot tougher to make a living, year after year, out here than win a golf tournament," said old pro Fred Marti.

"There's a lot of guys who've won tournaments that couldn't make it. They aren't on the tour any more. The tough thing is to keep on making a living."

And Marti, who has precipitated one of the tour's great mysteries, has made a living for 13 long seasons on the pro tour. He's yet to win. And therein lies the mystery.

Ask any veteran and he'll tell you it's a complete mystery how Marti could play as well as he has for as long as he has and not win.

William Jewell stays alive in tourney

STEVENS POINT, Wis. (AP) — Winona State, Minn., eliminated Wisconsin-La Crosse 10-8 Thursday in the Area 4 National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics baseball playoffs.

Mike Heutle had two home runs and three runs batted in for Winona, which earlier lost 7-6 to William Jewell, Mo., in the double-elimination meet.

William Jewell moved into the driver's seat with a 2-0 victory over Buena Vista, Iowa, and needed only one more victory to clinch the area championship. Pitcher Greg Baskley stopped the Iowa squad with 15 strikeouts and allowed only three hits.

William Jewell, 33-25, plays the winner of the Winona-Buena Vista game this afternoon.

La Crosse's first loss was a 6-3 decision to Buena Vista as Kirk Hiseveck and brother Chuck each had two-run home runs for the winners.

The playoff champion after today's final games will enter the NAIA national tournament in St. Joseph, Mo., May 28.

Factions in bitter fight

No graciousness at Golden City church

GOLDEN CITY, Mo. (AP) — There is no graciousness these days at Golden City's Grace Baptist Church.

A court order prohibits both factions in a bitter fight from using its small concrete block building in a residential section of Golden City, a town of 810 near the southwest corner of Missouri.

The immediate issue is the outcome of a court-ordered election, and there will be a hearing on May 24 on its validity.

The decision is up to Judge H.A. Kelso, who presides over the state's 28th Judicial Circuit and has been chairman of the board and trustee of the United Methodist Church at Nevada, Mo.

One of the factions in what was Grace Baptist Church looks to Arthur Davis, who donated the lot for its building in 1960, has been its chief contributor but is 87, blind and ill.

Mrs. Davis, besides being a money raiser and doing the bookkeeping, also was the main provider of janitorial work.

"I would go over and turn up the heat and do other things needed to be ready for services," said Mrs. Davis, who lives less than a block away.

Arrayed on the other side are the Rev. James Murphy, who moved from Springfield, Mo., to become pastor of Grace Baptist in October of 1974, and his adherents.

"He wanted to take over everything," Davis said.

"One Sunday night, the preacher held an unannounced business meeting and they voted me out of the church," Mrs. Davis said. "When I returned Wednesday night for prayer meeting, he held the door and physically prevented me from entering."

A congregational meeting dismissed the Rev. Mr. Murphy on March 27, 1975. He and his allies rented the civic building and started a new church. They later used another rented building.

On Jan. 12 this year, Murphy and his group asked for a court order granting them possession of Grace Baptist Church and prohibiting the other side from interfering. The Davis group quickly filed an almost identical petition, and Judge Kelso held a hearing on Feb. 20.

As the result, the contenders went to the office of the clerk of the Barton County Circuit Court at Lamar, Mo., on April 23 to cast ballots on which group should own the building and operate Grace Baptist Church.

"Each side thought the vote ended in a 17-17 tie," Judge Kelso said, "but that was not the way the ballots read when I counted them."

His count was 21 to 13, but he has not said for which side.

The Davis group challenged the election, alleging nine children from 6 to 15 years old cast ballots. It had filed with the clerk a list of 19 people it contended were bona fide members of the congregation. The Murphy group has a list of 58.

In its challenge, the Davis group says Murphy has a record book showing there is a bylaw that no one under 16 may vote in a church election.

So the Rev. Mr. Murphy is under subpoena to produce the "membership book" of Grace Baptist Church at the hearing on May 24.

The Davis group also is asking Judge Kelso to dissolve his order against its use of the church building and to award it $2,000 in damages from Murphy and his people.

Some of the Davis people held worship services at the Davis home until he became so ill.

Financial report withheld

Millions missing from Navajo savings

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. (AP) — The Navajo Nation had $73.6 million in federal cash reserves 12 years ago. But America's biggest Indian tribe is expected to have only $30 million left at the end of this fiscal year.

Several Navajo legislators and a growing groundswell of reservation Navajos are asking what has happened to the tribe's savings, compiled from such sources as mining and timber revenues and held in trust by the federal government. So are authorities, who are investigating reports of fiscal mismanagement.

The Justice Department has been examining tribal affairs for nearly a year; grand juries have indicted three Navajos, two for embezzlement and one for theft, and the tribal council says it may ask the federal General Accounting Office to audit its books.

So far, tribal chairman Peter MacDonald has declined to give a financial report to the estimated 160,000 Navajos. MacDonald, who took office in 1971, said the tribe's reserves have declined because more money is needed to provide services to a growing population.

Dissidents have raised a number of questions about:

—A lack of accounting. Several tribal councilmen said the only financial data about the tribal government comes in news reports.

—The $330,000 annual salary and fees received by the general counsel, George Vlassis of Phoenix.

—The Navajo Housing and Development Enterprise, set up by the tribe to use federal money for reservation housing construction, that went broke. It has asked $1.7 million in tribal funds to pay its bills.

—The Navajo Arts and Crafts Enterprise, which markets Navajo-made jewelry and rugs. It recently closed its shop here for lack of funds.

—A $13.3 million investment of federal funds earmarked for home construction with American Funding Corp., a Beverly Hills, Calif., investment firm now in receivership.

About 350 Navajo men and women marched on Window Rock, the Navajo capital, earlier this week with a list of grievances against the MacDonald administration. They asked appointment of a blue-ribbon panel to delve into tribal finances. They also sought reorganization of the tribal government.

The council agreed by a two-vote margin to consider the protest during its current spring session.

One of the strongest complaints was about a lack of accounting. The last audit of tribal books, by Ernst & Ernst, was in 1972. It said:

"Of $406.9 million in identified revenues, goods and services, only $45 million was being accounted for within the existing financial reporting system of the tribe as of June 30, 1972."

Cleaning up the Indian capital

New Delhi gets rid of beggars

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The outstretched hand of the beggar is no longer a familiar sight here in India's capital.

The thousands of lepers, ragged children and others who used to work on foreigners and better-off Indians for their bare subsistence have all but disappeared from downtown streets under the pressure of a Delhi administration crackdown on begging.

In the past year, nearly 5,000 beggars have been arrested and thousands more have fled to other cities or to the villages they had abandoned for the promise of the city.

The crackdown is part of an eight-month-old drive to clean up the capital and turn it into a model modern city, in part by bulldozing slums, moving lower class housing outside the city and beautifying the streets.

Critics charge that the entire approach of the federally controlled Delhi administration is cosmetic, removing the symbols of poverty without giving much attention or feeling to poor people or the causes of their plight.

But P.C. Kumar, the administration's joint director of social welfare, says Delhi is making "good progress" with the age-old problem of what to do with beggars.

"We are doing our best to see there is not a beggar on the road," Kumar said in a recent interview. "I don't think you can find a beggar very easily in Delhi today."

The same cannot be said of most large Indian cities, including Bombay, which recently moved thousands of beggars out of the city without arresting them. In a few weeks most were back.

"Of course driving him away is not solving the beggar problem. He'll just go elsewhere," Kumar said.

"Our answer is to put them in jail. I mean a certified institution, a beggars' home. We consider begging a social problem rather than a crime so we don't call them jails," he went on.

"In Delhi's nine certified institutions we try to determine a beggar's acumen, his strengths, and then we put him to work, to sort of rehabilitate him."

"Many, but not most, of the beggars have physical infirmities and we see that they get medical care," Kumar said. "Those who don't have limbs are put in what we call training-u-m-production centers where the handicapped are kept."

"Lepers are kept in a different place because of the disease and beggars' children are sent to a special home," he said.

Kumar said that in the beggars' homes many learn a trade which enables them to earn a living after serving the one-to-three years term the anti-begging act prescribes.

Government tells agencies to use private mail service

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is telling its agencies to try to save money by sending some mail through private delivery firms instead of through the more expensive U.S. Postal Service.

The General Services Administration made the statement about the government's own mail agency in a bulletin circulated last month to federal agencies.

The bulletin, entitled "Reducing Mail Costs," was released Thursday by Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill.

One of the 10 recommendations contained in the bulletin was: "Use commercial small-parcel carriers as a cheaper alternative to priority mail and U.S. Postal Service-insured parcels."

United Parcel Service, a Connecticut-based company, has surpassed the Postal Service in recent years in the parcel field. Its rates average about 20 per cent below those of the Postal Service.

For example, a two-pound parcel sent from Washington to New York costs 93 cents by the government's parcel post and 75 cents by United Parcel.

A Postal Service spokesman, commenting on the GSA bulletin, said "Government agencies are mandated by law to use the most economical means available to them."

The GSA bulletin said "increases in postage rates have significantly increased mailing costs" in recent years.

It said the federal government's postage costs increased from $301 million in fiscal year 1972 to $403 million in 1973, $457 million in 1974 and $519.7 million in 1975.

"Since fiscal year 1972, therefore, the increase has been over 72 per cent. Additional increases averaging about 29.7 per cent went into effect Dec. 31, 1975."

Simon, a critic of the Postal Service, said he found the GSA bulletin while looking into the extent of government use of private alternatives to the Postal Service.

"It's another example of how the Postal Service, with its inefficiency and increasing rates, is pricing itself out of the delivery market. There's something seriously wrong when public agencies have to abandon the public mail service in order to save money," he said.

Removing stains from tiles

If food or grease spilled on resilient flooring is not removed fairly soon, the spill will become a stain. The substance that caused the stain determines the material that will remove it.

The most effective stain removers are everyday items in the average household: Household bleach, white vinegar and water, hydrogen peroxide, rubbing alcohol, household ammonia, lighter fluid, and nail polish remover.

If these are tried in the order given, one of them will eventually solve the problem. In most cases the first one, household bleach, will do the job.

If the stain covers the entire floor, and is somewhat gummy, the cause may be too much wax, or too many coats on top of one another. A strong ammonia solution or commercial cleaner should clear it up.
